"I HATE CROOKS," SAYS T. R.

Colonel in New Jersey Speeches Returns to the Attack on Taft, While the President Continues to Hammer His Predecessor

LAKEWOOD, N. J., May 25.—"I've come to the conclusion that New Jersey is the real place for the strenuous life," declared Colonel Roosevelt, jocularly, to a crowd of 1,500 that greeted him in the public square here today. The colonel was immensely pleased with the rousing reception given him.

"You ought to be interested in this fight, because it is for you," he said. "See how kindly the President's manager, the other day, called you 'the rabble.' Do you think you are?"

"No," shouted the crowd.

Colonel Roosevelt hammered the issue, saying they would "cheat the people out of their rights."

"Mr. Taft says I preach class hatred," said the colonel.

"The only class I hate is the crook class, boss and all."

Mr. Roosevelt smiled when informed that President Taft had announced in his speech in New Brunswick last night that he (the President) had won the convention fight.

"We shall see about it," declared Colonel Roosevelt here today.

President Taft today toured the factory district of northern New Jersey, pleading with the toilers to support him in the primary election Tuesday.

At Bayonne Mr. Taft addressed 5,000 employes of the Standard Oil works. It was the most enthusiastic meeting at which the President had spoken since he entered the State.

In this speech President Taft charged Theodore Roosevelt with causing the failure of the arbitration treaties.

Mr. Taft defended his administration, calling particular attention to the workmen's compensation act and the white phosphorous act.

At Asbury Park Colonel Roosevelt said:

"We have got this fight going now. I want New Jersey to take a leading position in it. There is a straight line up between the people and the bosses."

Attacking Mr. Taft delegates in the Monmouth district for refusing to commit themselves openly to their candidate, the colonel said:

"Our delegates know how they stand, who they stand for and tell you so. Their opponents were originally for Mr. Taft, but now they think Mr. Taft's chances are rather shaky and so they are on the "Trust-me" bogie."

President Taft at Arlington declared that he has now has thirty delegates more than the 540 necessary to insure his nomination. He attacked Roosevelt, declaring that the Colonel has adopted the attitude and language of Louis XIV., whose historic remark was "I am the State." Roosevelt's claim, according to Mr. Taft, is "I am the Republican party."

ORDER WARSHIP READY FOR CUBA

WASHINGTON, May 25.—At the request of Secretary of State Knox, the Navy Department today ordered the battleship Nebraska, now at New Orleans, to Key West, to be able to protect Americans in Cuba, should conditions grow worse. Several warships will be mobilized at Key West in the next three days. From this point they can reach Cuban waters in a few hours. Orders were issued at the War Department to prepare for service all army transports on the Atlantic coast.

Apprehension is felt at the State Department today for the safety of Americans and their property at Banes and Nipe Bay, Cuba, where the Cuban government forces are reported to be entirely inadequate to repulse the negro insurrectionists.

It was announced today that if, on the arrival of the Prairie at Guantanamo on Monday, the revolt has not been halted, the American marines will be sent into the country to protect American property.

While both the War and Navy Departments today admitted orders have been issued to have soldiers and marines ready to move to Cuba instantly, officials declared no such step will be taken until Gomes has had a chance to "make good" on his promise that the revolt would be crushed in a week. But it is predicted that if the uprising is not quelled by Monday night, stringent measures will be taken by this government.

A dispatch from Santiago says a band of negroes attacked the plantation of Ell Sile, about fifteen miles from the city, and carried off all the horses, provisions and other plunder.

In connection with the uprising the authorities in Havana are said to have discovered a conspiracy to kill President Gomes. Several secret arrests have been made.

Residents of Havana were terror stricken when firing was heard at Casablanca, near Cabanas fortress, on the north shore of Havana Bay. The military guard maintained at the presidential palace was tripled today.

BRIDGE TROLLEY CRASH

Three Women and Man Injured as Arm of Charlestown Draw Strikes Car for Swampscott; Victims Taken to Relief Station.

Three women an done man were thrown from a Swampscott car and injured, when the arm of the Charlestown draw bridge on the Boston side struck the car. The injured people were thrown to the ground. An ambulance was called from the Hanover street station and the injured persons were rushed to the Relief Hospital.

The injured were Miss Mary Burns, twenty, of No. 41 Pinkham street, Lynn, contusions to the right hip.

Miss Molly Kelley, twenty-three, of No. 4 Hooper street, Chelsea, contusions on lower limbs.

Mrs. S. H. Tibbetts, fifty, of No. 37 Centre street, West Lynn, contusions to the left hip.

V. V. Shaw, twenty, of No. 21 Birch street, Chittondale, contusion to left ankle.

The injured persons were sitting on the ends of the seats in the car, which was an open one. The car was outward bound, having left the subway with a nSturday crowd.

When the side arm of the draw struck the car the impact was such that it forced the car back against another car in the rear and caused a collision. The draw was open to allow a vessel to pass.

MRS. GARLAND WEDS $1,000,000 HUSBAND

Mrs. James A. Garland was married at noon today to her schoolday sweetheart, Francis Cushing Green, for love of whom she sacrificed the income from the $1,000,000 estate left by her first husband.

The ceremony took place in the Garland country home at Bourne, down on Cape Cod. It was simple and homelike. Only relatives attended. Mrs. Garland's five children, four boys and a girl, were in the front row of the family group when the words were spoken which made their mother a bride for the third time.

Mrs. Garland was divorced from her first husband and married him again. Under his will by her marriage to Mr. Green she is cut off from the Garland estate which goes to her children.

Guards were posted all over the grounds during the ceremony.

Mr. Green, whom Mrs. Garland preferred to a fortune, has acted as manager of her property and affairs since the death of her first husband.

"Money isn't everything and love is—or pretty nearly," remarked the bride. "I'm marrying for love."

Mrs. Garland's daughter, Hope, aged six, the youngest of her five children, was her only attendant. James A. Garland, eldest son of Mrs. Garland, sixteen years old, was best man.

TRUTH ABOUT THE ESTATE.

A Boston lawyer, one of the trustees of the estate, said today: "Reports that Mr. Garland's estate is worth $10,000,000 are absurd. There have been a great many exaggerations published about Mrs. Garland and her property the past few days. Why not have the truth?

"Now I must confess that Mrs. Garland has made a great sacrifice to marry Mr. Green. There isn't any question about that. It's a glowing example of what a loyal woman is willing to do for the man she loves, but instead of tossing aside $10,000,000 by the ceremony she surrenders the income from the estate which is actually worth from $500,000 to $600,000.

"This income she might have had for life. By her marriage it reverts to her five children. Here is the governing clause in her first husband's will. There can be no dispute concerning its intent. The phraseology is clear to the point. It reads:

And I further will and declare that upon the decease of my said wife, or upon her remarriage, if she shall remarry, my said trustees shall stand seized and possessed of my said trust estate upon trust for the benefit of my sons, James A. Garland, Jr., Charles Garland and Hamilton Garland, and their issue, in manner following, that is to say:

Upon trust, to divide my said trust estate into as many equal parts as there shall be said sons of mine then living and said sons then deceased leaving issue then living, and to pay over the net rents, divi-

UNITED STATES SUES 2,659 GLASS EYES

CHICAGO, May 25.—The United States vs. "2,659 glass eyes" is the title of a suit brought in the Federal Court here by United States District Attorney Wilkerson. The action is in the form of a libel against the glass eyes seized by the collector of customs from a Chicago optical concern. The government charges that the eyes were smuggled.

BOSTON BEACHES READY TO OPEN

All of Boston's beach bathing establishments are ready for opening, and should there be another spell of hot weather they can be thrown open inside of two hours. The season's opening is scheduled for June 15, but if the present hot spell continues, or if the mercury should climb higher the Bath Commission stands ready to throw open all of the city's beach bath houses.

PARSEVAL VI. IS DESTROYED LIKE ITS PREDECESSORS

LEIPZIG, Germany, May 25.—The dirigible balloon Parseval VI. was completely destroyed here today, being torn from its anchor by a squall. One of the soldiers on guard near the balloon was injured by the flying tackle. The Parseval VI. had arrived only that morning and had been anchored in an open field. The flexible dirigible balloons of the Parseval type have been almost as unlucky as the rigid Zeppelin dirigibles. Parseval VI. had already met with several accidents. Parseval II. was wrecked at Hittenfeld on May 17, 1911. Parseval III. was damaged during a forced landing in a snow storm near Hittenfeld on November 16, 1909, and Parseval V. was destroyed by fire at Hanoversch-Muended on June 27, 1911.

LAWYERS WILL PLEAD WOMAN'S CASE MONDAY

Following a conference with Attorneys Grady and Coughlin, counsel for Mrs. Lena Cusumano, under sentence of death with Enrico Mascioli for the murder of the woman's husband, Governor Foss announced this afternoon he would give a hearing Monday forenoon in his office at the State House on the woman's petition for clemency.

The lawyers will present their evidence and make their arguments before the Governor then. Governor Foss may then refer the petition to the Executive Council for action, with or without recommendations.

HER PETITION FOR CLEMENCY.

The plea for commutation of the death sentence of Mrs. Cusumano, filed today with Governor Foss, is as follows:

May 22, 1912.

To His Excellency, Eugene Noble Foss, and the Honorable Council:

I hereby request that the sentence of death pronounced upon me in the Superior Court for the County of Plymouth be commuted, and I leave the presentation of this request and the reasons therefor with my counsel.

(Signed) MRS. LENA CUSUMANO—X

(Signature witnessed by William E. Baker, deputy jailer of the Plymouth County Jail).

Attorney Grady received the paper today and went at once to the Charlestown

Hospital Head Gives Blood to Save Infant

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, May 25. To save the life of a three weeks' old infant, niece of his wife, John M. Merriam, president of Framingham Hospital, submitted to an operation for the transfusion of blood, which apparently was successful. The latest reports given out indicate that Mr. Merriam stood the operation well, the infant showed signs of renewed vitality, and in the opinion of the attending physicians would continue to improve.

The name of the child is Mary Daniels Davenport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner N. Davenport, who live in Cuba. The child soon after its birth suffered from a slight sore on one of its ears, and in the attempt to relieve the growth an operation became necessary. The wound caused by the removal of the pimple failed to heal, and despite the best medical and surgical attendance, it continued to bleed. The child became so weak that its recovery was in grave doubt, and the father was summoned from Cuba.

An incision was made in the left wrist of Mr. Merriam, the radial artery was tapped and the blood transfused into the femoral artery of the infant's leg.

WOMAN FALLS 30 FEET FROM WINDOW

While watering flowers on a window sill, Mrs. Elizabeth Gonnella, forty-eight, of No. 345 Sumner street, East Boston, lost her balance and fell thirty feet to the ground. Mrs. Gonnella was taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital, where her name was placed on the dangerous list.

MRS. CUSUMANO ASKS THAT HER LIFE BE SAVED

CUT THIS OUT AND MAIL TO GOV. FOSS

To His Excellency, Governor Foss and the Honorable Executive Council of Massachusetts:

You are hereby petitioned by the residents of this State whose names are undersigned to exercise the power of clemency invested in you and commute the death sentence of Mrs. Lena Cusumano, convicted of murder in Plymouth County, to life imprisonment.

We ask this because the condemned prisoner is a WOMAN and a MOTHER. No woman has been put to death by the State in half a century. No woman should be executed in this State.

The electrocution of Mrs. Cusumano would be a lasting disgrace to Massachusetts, and we believe that the whole State feels strongly that her life should be saved.

State prison to secure the signature of Mascioli to a similar petition. When this had been obtained, the lawyer, with his associate, William A. Coughlin, and Mrs. Florence Spooner, went to the Executive Chamber and presented the petitions to the Governor.

"Representing Motherhood."

While Mrs. Spooner was waiting to see the Governor, she said to reporters: "I am here representing the motherhood, not only of America, but of all the nations and people in the world. I will do my utmost to save this woman—a mother—from the electric chair.

"I know very little about this crime which Mrs. Cusumano is alleged to have committed, but I do know that she is the mother of three children. That fact alone should be instrumental in causing the Governor and his council to extend clemency to her.

"It would be a great blot upon the fair name of Massachusetts if a woman, particularly a mother, was allowed to go to the chair. We should work for forgiveness and remission of sin. We can not accomplish anything along this line by killing in revenge."

It was commented that the petition does not specify "commutation to life imprisonment," as is the usual form. The Governor's Council has power only so to commute, but Mrs. Cusumano, through her attorneys, is pleading her absolute innocence of the charge against her, and so did not commit herself to "life imprisonment."

Petition for Mascioli.

The petition for the commutation of Mascioli's sentence was somewhat a surprise at the State House. Attorney Grady stated today that the man is prepared to bare the entire inside history of the crime, and that the story which he will tell will completely exonerate Mrs. Cusumano of guilt. In a statement issued to the press, Attorney Grady said:

"We shall give to the public, with his consent, the statement of Enrico Mascioli as to what transpired."

It is known that the attorneys are relying on his statement to free the woman.

In analyzing the evidence upon which Mrs. Cusumano was convicted, the defense attorneys make the charge that the testimony of Mrs. Endeligato, sister of Mrs. Cusumano, was biased and that Mrs. Endeligato swore her sister's life away as a result of an ancient quarrel between the two.

The attorneys declare that Mrs. Endeligato came to America before her sister, fleeing with her sister's fiance, and that her marriage to Endeligato created a bitter enmity between the two women.

The statement issued by attorneys Grady and Coughlin is as follows:

"Counsel for Lena Cusumano believed and have always believed in her innocence and in view of the statement of her mother, wherein she says Lena told her 'she knew nothing of the affair until informed of it by Harry Marshall,' we feel the public should know at this time the facts upon which we base our opinion as to her innocence.

"We are dealing now with the case of Lena Cusumano only, and shall give the public, with the consent of Harry Marshall, his statement of what transpired later on.

"In the Assistant District Attorney's opening he said that 'Lena was assisting to the act, was present, and was aiding and abetting him, in the room where the blow as the Commonwealth claims, was struck.'

The government offered three classes of evidence to substantiate its theory:

First—Alleged admissions to the brother-in-law and sister of Lena Cusumano.

Second—Bloody clothing alleged to be the property of Lena Cusumano.

Third—Testimony from the daughter of Lena Cusumano that she and her sisters were given money to buy coats previous to the time of the alleged murder.

"As to the first contention: Mr. and Mrs. Endeligato, brother-in-law and sister of Lena Cusumano, testified that Lena told them both, 'She had him killed and paid $35 to have him killed,' and 'saw him killed with their own eyes. They struck him with an ax on the neck.'

"Counsel consider this testimony preposterous and unworthy of belief, for if the government's motive for the murder be correct, namely, to promote an illicit relationship between both, the improbability of paying of requiring money to dispose of Frank Cusumano is readily apparent.

Quarrel Over Man.

In connection with this testimony, evidence was offered and the same was uncontradicted that Mrs. Endeligato secretly and unknown to Lena Cusumano came to this country and married Mr. Endeligato, the former sweetheart of Lena Cusumano. Since that day to the present time Lena Cusumano and Mr. and Mrs. Endeligato have been bitter enemies.

"Second—The blood-stained clothing alleged to be the property of Lena Cusumano was never claimed to have been worn by Lena Cusumano at the time of the alleged killing and is accounted for by the testimony of Professor Whitney, the blood expert, who testified that the clothes could have been used as a mop. There was no evidence to show that Lena Cusumano used them as such and even if she should have used them, this would not justify a finding that she participated in the killing.

"Third—The statement of Awessia, daughter of Lena Cusumano, that she was given money to buy candy on this Sunday was qualified by her statement that she frequently had been given money by her mother on Sunday afternoon to buy candy and it afforded no inference that she was given away on this particular Sunday in order that a crime might be committed.

Daughter's Story "Memorized."

"In connection with the testimony of the daughter, counsel wish to say that she was kept under close surveillance by another sister of Mrs. Cusumano for a long period after the alleged killing and was prevented by her aunt on all occasions from telling counsel for Mrs. Cusumano what she knew about the matter.

"She testified under cross-examination, that she practically memorized the story she gave on the witness stand. This was the only evidence offered at the trial which in any way tended to incriminate the woman.

"The only manner in which this verdict can be explained, in our opinion, is the result of inferences drawn by the jury against her as the result of her refusal to shed any light upon the matter. Her attitude can only be explained through her ignorance of the laws and customs of our courts, whereby she believed, though innocent, no duty devolved upon her to disclose any information that might make trouble for another.

"In conclusion, we wish to say that from our investigation of the facts in this case we believe that Lena Cusumano is not guilty of the crime of murder."

Mrs. Spooner Leads Fight.

Following Attorney Grady's assertion of Mrs. Cusumano's innocence, Mrs. Florence Spooner issued a statement in the nature of a "call to arms" to the women of Massachusetts.

"I am convinced that the women of Massachusetts will not allow Mrs. Lena Cusumano to go to the electric chair," declared Mrs. Spooner.

"There is a tremendous change in public opinion and there is now a widespread sentiment favorable to abolition of capital punishment, particularly for women, since the indorsement of the movement by high civic and religious powers.

"The execution of the death penalty is a direct and profane blow at the sacredness of motherhood. Chivalry is not dead in Massachusetts, and the sacredness of motherhood will be protected. I believe to the extent that this mother's sentence will be commuted.

"It is not even right that Mrs. Cusumano be removed to the State Prison, where there are no women guards. It isn't to be dreamed that men should guard a woman in the death cell in a civilized age. We also protest the removal of Mrs. Cusumano to Charlestown."

Name Your "Princess" Today

Contest Open to New England

MISS BAILEY, CHARLESTOWN 'PRINCESS' CANDIDATE

Nominations of candidates in the AMERICAN'S Princess contest are in order.

That's easy to see, judging by the number of letters the Princess Contest Editor is receiving from all over New England. If you haven't nominated your candidate, today is the best time to do so. Others have named their candidates and are already working to pile up the ballots.

The candidates will be getting more and more numerous. Time flies, you know. By making your nomination to the Contest Editor and sending in a picture of your candidate, you can get the benefit of being in the race early.

Tomorrow the Sunday AMERICAN prints news of interest to every candidate and every friend of every candidate, and that comes pretty near meaning the news will be interesting to all New England. In the first place the AMERICAN to-morrow will print a page of pictures of candidates. These will be a big feature. Further, the AMERICAN will print a full list of the candidates in the Princess contest, which will make another big feature.

New England people are just beginning to realize that there are no strings to the AMERICAN'S contest. Heart wholesome fun, as the girls say. To the winner in the contest the AMERICAN offers the outfit of a Princess, absolutely without cost to herself.

One of the most interesting candidates for the Princess contest is Miss Blanche Bailey of No. 65 Chapman street, Charlestown. The many friends of Miss Bailey declare she will be among the most popular of all those seeking the great New England honor.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 2,000,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

SONS AND DAUGHTER SEE GARLAND WEDDING

dends, interest and profits from one of said shares quarter-yearly unto each of my said sons for and during his natural life.

MONEY GOES TO HER CHILDREN.

"Although only three sons were named in the will, there was another son born subsequent to its execution, July 19, 1906, and a daughter. The five children are James A., Charles, Hamilton, Tudor and Hope Garland.

"Under the distinct order of the will the income which the widow might have enjoyed from the $000,000 trust estate for life, amounting to about $70,000 annually, she will no longer get. It will pass to her children, who, by the way, are heirs to another estate left by another relative, and I understand it is a considerable estate, too.

"So you can see the Garland children, all of them minors, are comfortably fixed. Now let us view this situation from a commonsense perspective. Granting that Mrs. Garland has made the very great sacrifice of direct personal income, we must not overlook that the guardians of her children will not let her want. At least, they are not likely to.

"As we view it, Mrs. Garland will be reduced to whatever income her new husband can provide, and to the benefits that are very likely to accrue from the properties held by her children, though the latter cannot or will not be derived directly.

"I understand Mrs. Garland has some money in her own name, how much I do not know. It is not near as much as she has sacrificed by her wedding today, however."

Coal Price to Drop 50 Cents on June 1

Coal will be lower in Boston about June 1, although it will still be higher. That is, higher by fifty cents a ton than it was last Summer. The anthracite miners, just granted a 10 per cent. raise in wages, will get twenty-five cents of this. Mr. Average Citizen, as he spends his vacation money laying in next Winter's supply, will quite possibly ask where the other quarter goes. In spite of all, he will have the laugh on his neighbors, who bought at top prices in the Winter in anticipation of a coal strike.

The Winter price for coal was $7.50 a ton and when the layoff of the anthracite miners occurred the price was raised to $8, in order to conserve the supply, it was explained. The miners returned to work last Wednesday and shipments are not expected before next Saturday.

DROPS GIRL'S CASE AGAINST JEWELER

District Attorney Pelletier has dropped the case of Julius Prince, jeweler, No. 357 Harrison avenue, who was arrested on the charge of conspiracy in connection with the taking of a diamond ring from Ida Lawkofsky. It was shown a man took the ring Miss Lawkofsky claims was here to prince to have it repaired, and afterward called for it. Miss Lawkofsky then demanded the ring.

Fat Reduced 73 Pounds

Mrs. Wright Got Thinner and Healthier Every Day.

Burdened with Fat.

The friends of Blanche Wright, the widely-known and popular entertainer, were amazed at observing her as she gradually became thinner until reduced to an agreeable figure. She had succeeded wonderfully fat in the shape of a few years, and now she gradually lost weight until the scales proved she had got rid of 73 pounds of superfluous fat.

She is a busy, ambitious woman, and had tried various methods of reducing weight, all in vain. Mrs. Wright took pills that were advertised and which she got at drug stores, she tried a "drugless" treatment and dieting, rubbed various things on her body and experimented with numerous other remedies without success. But at last she found just what she sought, a genuine self-treatment method that any fat person of either sex can easily follow. It is a safe and reliable way to get thin. This riddance of fat improves the health, beautifies the figure and lengthens life. Any reader who would like to know the secret can learn it free of cost by writing to Mrs. Blanche Wright, 1014B Waterloo, Indiana. Better enclose a stamp for her reply. She has nothing to sell.

RAYMOND

The Largest Circulation of Men's Hats in New England.

We state only as a business fact that our daily circulation is larger than that of any ten stores in New England, and larger than the evening circulation of all the stores in Boston combined, although we keep open only Saturday evenings.

Yours truly

RAYMOND

With thirty-five years' experience buying and selling men's hats we ought to know when and where and how to buy them; also to know what the public demands and the prices that will be popular, but we make prices more than popular and guarantee the greatest values in the world.

Yours truly

RAYMOND

In all our thirty-five years' experience in buying and selling we have, of all kinds it is only proper to state that we were never so well supplied with genuine bargains in the most desirable and useful goods for men, boys, women and children. We think we have more men's fancy shirts at 25 cents & $1.55 each than any ten retail stores in Boston. Please do not think we say this boastingly, because it represents a fact belonging to the public and is only a business proposition.

Yours truly

RAYMOND

You may not know or realize that ours was the first bargain basement in the world, possibly more than twenty years before this store. It now extends from 352 to 366 Washington St. and we think contains more real bargains in Clothing, Hats and Caps, Underwear, etc., etc., etc., etc. than any of the unoriginal bargain basements which have been opened all the way from Boston to San Francisco.

Yours truly

RAYMOND

We are offering three more complete stocks of Boots and Shoes purchased within a week. That of James Morehead, Amesbury, Mass., the stock of E. F. Barthel, Provincetown, Mass. These are all Men's, Women's and Children's Goods. Also exactly 10,256 pairs of Ladies' Oxfords of white buck button, patent leather and other Boots and Shoes from the factory of Travers & Smith Co., Peabody, Mass. All ready by the time you see this notice.

Yours truly

RAYMOND

Ordinarily the purchase of these three stocks of Boots and Shoes all within seven days, would occupy the time of a modern add writer for weeks, but this is all we shall have to say about them because others will continue to take their places. Same with clothing and other goods.

Yours truly

RAYMOND

Where you bot the hat.

'MEDICS' REVIVE CLASS DAY FETE

The senior class of the Harvard Medical School celebrated graduation by class day exercises at the school, re-establishing a custom which had been discontinued since 1908. There were about 400 guests.

Addresses were made by President Lowell and Dr. E. H. Bradford, '69, dean-elect of the school. The "Poison Ivy" section was by L. W. Hackett, who had received the largest vote as the "funniest man in the class." This was followed by a collation and dancing. An opportunity was also afforded the visitors to inspect the laboratories, libraries, museums and recitation halls.

The committee on arrangements were: L. W. Hackett, chairman; F. M. Rackemann, secretary; O. F. Rogers, Jr., commencement marshal; F. Tratt, Mac. L. Woody, P. J. Look, L. T. Armsworth and P. D. Wilson, president of the class, and G. H. Minot, permanent secretary, ex-officio.

The members of the junior class were ushers under the leadership of Elliot C. Cutler, a former captain of the Harvard varsity crew, and a member of the third year class.

Among those present were: Dr. and Mrs. William T. Councilman, Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Southard, Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Rosenau, Dr. John Collins Warren, Dr. John Warren, Dr. Maurice H. Richardson, Dr. Frederick C. Shattuck, Dr. Harold C. Ernest, Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Cannon, Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Bradford, Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Lorent, Dr. and Mrs. F. T. Lord, Dr. and Mrs. Augustus Thorndike, Dr. Paul Thorndike, Dr. H. A. Christian, Dr. D. W. Cheever, Dr. and Mrs. Channing Frothingham.

200 CONFIRMED BY CARDINAL AT THE CATHEDRAL

The sacrament of confirmation was administered at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross by Cardinal O'Connell, assisted by Monsignor Splaine, rector of the Cathedral, and by the Rev. Fathers McCoy, Scanlon, Finnigan, Hickey, Cronin and Redican.

The confirmation class included 160 boys and girls of the Cathedral Sunday School and forty adults, several of whom are converts.

The cardinal addressed the newly confirmed, exhorting them to be true to their solemn pledges to lead good and holy lives and be ever vigilant through prayer against the temptations of the world.

STATE LOSES APPEAL ON AWARD TO BANK

By a decision of the Supreme Court, the Fourth National Bank will be awarded $145,704.78 against the State as the result of taking land belonging to the bank for the establishment of an insane hospital at Mattapan. The case was tried before Judge Stevens in the Superior Court and went to the Supreme Court on exceptions taken by Attorney-General Malone. The exceptions were overruled and the verdict sustained.

Dr. Higgins Awarded Divorce Decree

Wins Case on Ground of Desertion

MRS. HIGGINS AND CHILDREN, CUSTODY OF WHOM IS YET TO BE DETERMINED.

Surgeon to Take Children to Beach; Final Custody to Be Determined Later.

Dr. Frank A. Higgins of No. 384 Commonwealth avenue was granted a divorce decree by Judge Pierce from Mrs. Marion Lawrence Higgins of the Hotel Tullerles, No. 270 Commonwealth avenue.

The decree was granted on the grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Higgins withdrew the cross-libel she had filed, alleging cruel and abusive treatment and asking divorce, alimony and custody of the two children.

Dr. Higgins will take the children to the beach for the Summer. Next fall, if the parents have not settled the question of the children between them, they will submit it to the courts again.

Prominent in Society.

The entire divorce proceedings took only ten minutes and occurred in a manner to attract the least attention. Even the courthouse reporters scented the hearing only by accident.

The divorce affects Boston and Brookline society. Dr. Higgins is one of the leading surgeons in the city. Mrs. Higgins is the daughter of A. C. Lawrence, a wealthy leather manufacturer. She is rich in her own right. Mrs. Higgins has been particularly prominent in society.

Friends of the Higginses say that behind all this lies a story which deals with Dr. Higgins' devotion to his profession, of Mrs. Higgins' desire that he give it up, at least in part, and the love of both for their children, Lawrence, fifteen years old, and Freeman, ten years old, for the custody of whom a bitter battle will be waged.

The Higginses were married seventeen years ago. Dr. Higgins was then just out of medical school. At the time great things were predicted for him—a prophecy he has well filled. At present he ranks among the ablest surgeons in the city.

Mrs. Higgins as Marion Lawrence had been prominent with the younger set. She never took the same interest in her husband's profession that he did, and when, four years ago, the death of a relative left her lumensely wealthy, she brought him to give it up. He is still practicing.

Hides in Seclusion.

Mrs. Higgins went back to her father's home in the Tullerles. She took her boys with her.

The separation caused considerable talk, but interest dropped in time. A short time after the separation, which had begun in October, 1910, the younger son, Freeman, who with his older brother attends the Volkmann school, was met by Dr. Higgins on his way from there to the Tullerles.

Dr. Higgins took the boy home. Mrs. Higgins' father got into communication with Sherman L. Whipple, the Boston attorney, and with him went to Dr. Higgins' home. The boy was brought back to his mother.

The Lawrences are extremely proud of their grandsons. One of the reasons for the cross libel filed by Mrs. Higgins was said by friends to be the fear that their father might be given custody of them.

FAVOR $750,000 OFFICE BUILDING

The State House Commission has sent in a report to the House recommending the appropriation of $750,000 for the construction of an office building as an addition to the State House, to extend along Mt. Vernon street from the present building as far as Joy street, involving taking of the Baker estate.

After making this recommendation the commission says:

"We further recommend that on this lot there be erected a Commonwealth building for the use of the State departments, in accordance with plans prepared by Mr. William Chapman, architect, that the sum of $750,000 be appropriated to fulfill the recommendations in this report, and also that the land adjoining be purchased.

"The commission was also required to report on the advisability of providing accommodations in the State House for the Supreme Court. An investigation of this matter convinces us that the Supreme Judicial Court is well taken care of in the Suffolk County Courthouse, and our opinion that they should not be assigned quarters in the State House is strengthened by the fact that the Commonwealth joined with the county of Suffolk in paying the expenses of the recent enlargement of the courthouse in which the sittings of the Supreme Court are held."

The building which the commission recommends will be five stories high, 80 feet wide and 230 feet long, with light on all four sides, and connected with the westerly side of the State House directly back of the Bulfinch front to Mt. Vernon street.

AVIATOR FREEMAN BEATS B. & M. TRAIN

Arch Freeman, driving a biplane, with George C. Parker as passenger, beat an in-bound Boston & Maine express across West Lynn marshes today in a mile race.

Freeman started from Atwood Park, Cliftonville, flew over to West Lynn at a 200 foot elevation and circled the General Electric's works, where 7,000 employes applauded.

The express came down the Eastern or shore branch of the Portsmouth division. Freeman headed the biplane down the track, caught up with the train, held neck and neck with it for three-quarters of a mile, then passed it and came back, while the passengers crowded the platforms or leaned from the windows.

GENERAL MILES COULDN'T GET HALL

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 25.—Inability to obtain an auditorium compelled the cancellation at the last moment of the engagement of Nelson A. Miles to speak at the debate on "America's Danger." The lecture was to have been under the auspices of the Guardians of Liberty, and this was the reason for calling off the meeting. The objection was made by Catholics on the ground that the Guardians of Liberty are opposed to the Catholic religion.

120,000 MEN OUT IN DOCK STRIKE

LONDON, May 25.—The dock workers' strike today was complicated by the walkout of the carters' union and it is now estimated more than 120,000 men are out.

London's transport industry is almost tied up, and the situation is menacing because of the steady rise in the price of foodstuffs. There are now at the docks more than 150 vessels loaded with food supplies, but there are no men to unload them nor carry them to market.

The Liberal press, which last Summer supported the dock men's strike for shorter hours and better wages, is generally censuring the present movement, declaring the strike is without justification. With portable foods decaying on the docks and heavy wagons taken from the streets, London already has some of the appearances of a besieged city.

The full effect of the transport workers' strike will not be felt until after the Whit Monday holiday.

Although there was a meeting of strikers yesterday by a large number of transport workers, a great many of the men are still at work with the object of securing a week's wages to be used for holiday purposes on Monday.

The price of flour has gone up a shilling a barrel.

The King discussed the situation with Sir George R. Askwith, chairman of the industrial council, whose efforts in settling labor disputes have been markedly successful.

Several ocean steamers have been held up among them the Atlantic liner Minneapolis. By next week some will be able to sail unless they leave without cargo.

OFFICER GETS FOUR UNAIDED

Patrolman "Bobby" Dale of the East Dedham street station arrested four young men, single handed, who had entered the store of the New York Clothing Company, at No. 1025 Washington street, South End. Dresses, hats and plumes, valued at $500, had been packed up ready to be carted away. They were held in $1,200 for the grand jury in Suffolk Municipal Court.

The patrolman saw the young men standing in the doorway of the store. As he approached one of them ran. Dale drew his revolver. He caught one of the men, who gave the name of Frank Davis.

Dale forced Davis into the store at the point of the gun. He barricaded the door and forcing Davis to go on ahead, uncovered three others who were crouching under counters. They gave the names of George F. Brown, Elmer T. Drake and John F. Mullen.

LEVANZIN TELLS ORDEAL IMPOSED DURING FAST

The hardships Professor Agostino Levanzin endured during his long fast at the Nutrition Laboratory of the Carnegie Institute in Roxbury, are detailed today in the fourth installment of the narrative he has prepared for the AMERICAN. The monotony of the long "inanition test" is well brought out. The air in the calorimeter room, he declares, was often bad.

By AGOSTINO LEVANZIN.

On the 12th of April, in the evening, I was allowed a warm bath. Since that time I was never permitted to use soap. Every Saturday, Mr. Carpenter used to sponge me, standing up in a tub, with very hot distilled water, sometimes so hot as to redden my skin. They wanted to collect the secretions of the skin to study them. For the same purpose I had to keep my underwear on the whole week long. This was washed with distilled water and the secretions collected.

At my request a barber used to come every Friday, to trim my hair and beard. The hair was scrupulously collected to study its growth during inanition.

The first night they applied the stethoscope on my breast by simply using it with adhesive plaster. Next morning, to take the stethoscope off, was a torture for me that I shall never forget. They pulled at my hair, and the pain was atrocious.

Then they cut it off and made a clean area, shaving it with a razor. To take off the plaster was also a torture and a loss of time. Finally, a band of india rubber was devised that did not hurt me at all. Could not Dr. Benedict solve that problem before?

Finds Quarters Cramped.

In one of his letters he promised to provide me with sleeping quarters. He never did it. He put me in a balcony in the calorimeter room, about twelve feet long, five feet wide, and seven feet high. I had only one window that could be opened, of about one foot square. But as this was immediately on my desk, I could not open it for whole weeks, as rain and cold wind entered on my face and papers.

I had a dirty couch to lie on, without a sheet.

The stairs of this balcony are so steep and narrow that once, in coming down, I slipped and if I had not caught hold of the railing and remain suspended in the air on my arms, I would have broken my backbone. This happened on the twelfth day of my fast and Mr. Jones can testify to it. I had to go up and down there very dangerous steps several times a day.

Dr. Benedict sent a letter to Dr. Ingrett, my father-in-law, in which he stated that in the balcony I had plenty of space to walk about, with couch, bed and two or three chairs.

Hundreds of persons have been to see me. I challenge every one of them to state that there ever was a chair in the balcony. Was all that Dr. Benedict stated in his lecture so true in every detail?

He concluded: "He appears to be an unusually intelligent man, and his psychological examination shows him to be perfectly capable of exercising his own judgment."

Drank Distilled Water.

Every morning, after being weighed, I used to drink a glass of water. I have used only distilled water during the whole fast. Never before was a scientific fast conducted on distilled water. I did this to inquire better results. Since I began to drink mineral water, which, according to Professor Luciani, kept up his body weight. On the first day I consumed a litre; during the other days till the end only 900 cubic centimetres. Sometimes I was not thirsty at all, but I used to strain myself and drink it.

I wished to keep normal results. I used to drink it cold. This covered the taste and refreshed me. It was the only palatable enjoyment of my fast.

Before starting the fast Professor William Anderson of Yale University took all the measurements of my body with great accuracy. He also made some dynamometric tests. The measurements were taken every Thursday morning during the whole fast. The strength tests were omitted. The dynamometric one was included in Professor Langfeld's program.

Dr. Benedict told me that Professor Anderson was the most clever man in this branch of studies in America. He is a very amiable and kind gentleman. I cherish his memory with great veneration.

Before starting the fast a great number of photographs were taken of my body in different postures. Dr. Benedict is a very good photographer himself. A set of photographs used to be taken every Thursday morning. This was done to mark the difference in the increasing emaciation of the body tissues.

I have been photographed also with all the different apparatus. I asked me all the professors who were conducting my experiments as well.

At my suggestion photographs of the head were taken separately, to be sent to some eminent anthropologist to establish upon them whether I was a normal subject or not. Dr. Benedict said that there was not one in America who would do this research. I sent them to Europe to an eminent Italian professor who promised me to do the study and send me a report.

Insisted on Search.

After this I used to dress myself up. Then Mr. Carpenter used to bring me up my mail. I asked him to open it in my presence to assure him that it did not contain poison, which could be eaten. I was very strict about this. I wished that there could be no doubt about the genuineness of my fast. I asked also Dr. Benedict to examine my baggage, clothes, books, etc., before starting for my home. This was done by him and Mr. Carpenter very thoroughly.

They examined my grip, my bag, my gaze, the balcony, everywhere with the utmost diligence. I was glad of it.

What displeased me was that when my letters were violated upstairs they handed them in the balcony wide opened. This was a horrible shock. I have described already it in a heart-rending way. It happened for three days. Upon I grumbled about it with one of the assistants. Dr. Benedict came next morning with my mail in hand himself. This time it was violated. He told me that it was very bad to do that and that I could not happen any more. I added that it was very unlawful, and that in my country it was a crime punishable with the years of hard labor. The mail was brought to me intact. I started to open it in Mr. Carpenter's presence.

Protested "Imprisonment."

Dr. Benedict insisted upon my not sending any information about the fast to anyone. He asked me to write to my friends not to pass the least information to the press. I told the latter news-papers men intensely. He used to speak very loudly at first. He never allowed anyone to call me by name. He never allowed anyone to call me by name but his "Methodo" of inanition. His statement was to the effect that he was supposed to be a prisoner, and that the crime of murder, as charged, was the worst form of murder, as charged. Then, at the time, Gilbert was 20 years of age. When buried into a balcony he was a boy. It is only one of many cases whose horror that you think, and I don't care what you think, but I will tell you what I think of the fiendish murderer. Him, which stalks up and down our land. I think it is an offense of Hell, a curse to mankind and a reproach to our boasted civilization. And I will become apoplectic to refer to "Christian America" while we permit this nefarious thing to thrive in our midst.

Speaking of legal murders, I was present when Gilbert was hanged in the Charles Street Jail. The force of the fall broke his neck his statement was to the effect that he supposed he was going to die, but that the crime of murder, as charged, was the worst form of murder, as charged. WELLESLEY TALK.

By MORTON BIRGE.

(Wellesley College phrases—"Gloriously wonderful," "perfectly snorting," "Cutsyly cute.")

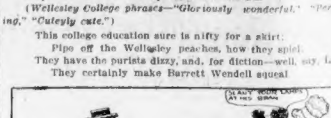
This college education sure is nifty for a skirt;
Pipe off the Wellesley peaches, how they spiel!
They have the purists dizzy, and, for diction—well, say, Lizzie!
They certainly make Barrett Wendell squeal



The Wellesley College girlie learns to shoot a line of talk
That Addison and Johnson never heard;
Her cheery college chatter is a slangy, speckled spatter,
With now and then an ordinary word.

We all admire the Wellesley girl, the way she looks and acts;
That "Goddess" line describes the way she walks;
And so, not as a jolly, but a compliment, by Golly!
We've tried to write this stuff the way she talks.

DELAY GRAND TRUNK MEASURE

The Senate today postponed action on the Grand Trunk bill until Monday, in order that certain amendment may be printed and pending the receipt of the opinion of the Railroad Commission on whether or not the provisions of the bill which permit the road to issue bonds to twice the amount of its capital stock are "in the public interest."

The motion to postpone was made by Senator Charles H. Brown of Medford, who led the fight against the merger of the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads. The motion was adopted on a viva voce vote. Senator Joseph H. Schlesinger of Ware, chairman of the Committee on Railroads, which reported the Grand Trunk bill, gave notice that he would oppose action on any amendment until they were printed "so the members may know what they are voting on." He intimated that some of the amendments that have been offered are aimed to kill the bill.

There are three amendments to the Grand Trunk bill now pending before the Senate. Two of these are offered by Senator Brown of Medford, one adding a new section from the anti-discrimination act, that the Southern New England (Grand Trunk) shall not at any time charge, demand or receive a greater sum for transportation of freight included for export than any other railroads charge. The second Brown amendment would make subject to the approval of the Railroad Commission the permission given the Grand Trunk to acquire and operate steamboat lines, and would also set aside and negotiate the stock and securities of terminal companies. The third amendment is offered by Senator Denny of Worcester. He would leave out the railroad commission clause, and whether the Grand Trunk may take the stock or rights belonging to other public service corporations, not necessary for the corporation's present business.

President Greenwood today told me that under the amendment offered by Senator Horgan of Dorchester yesterday to say Governor Foss' "public utilities" protect on the bill.

In speaking on the motion for postponement, Senator Schlesinger said:

"I shall not oppose the motion to postpone, but I wish to give notice that if any further amendments are to be offered they shall be printed and must be offered in time to be printed.

"If it is proposed to put on any amendments to this bill in an attempt to kill it, that will not be permitted and by putting them through without allowing the Senators to understand the amendments, I propose to put them to vote that these amendments fail."

ISMAY DRUGGED, SAYS WIRELESS MAN ON OLYMPIC

NEW YORK, May 25.—Senator William Alden Smith, chairman of the Titanic investigating committee, accompanied by Rear Admiral Watt as a naval expert, boarded the White Star liner Olympic, sister ship of the Titanic, today and took testimony from Captain Henry J. Haddock, wireless operator Ernest J. Moore and members of the crew.

One of the interesting statements made by Moore was that among the wireless messages he received after the Carpathia had picked up the Titanic survivors, was one which stated that J. Bruce Ismay was under the influence of an opiate.

Moore said he did not know what this message meant, but he presumed that Mr. Ismay had been given the opiate to quiet his nerves after the Titanic struck. Afterward the scene of the disaster, Moore said Ismay sent a message to Haddock ordering Captain Haddock to turn back and proceed to England, as he did not want survivors of the Carpathia to see the sister ship of the boat which sank.

PROFESSOR RANDALL SELECTED AS NEW DEAN OF BROWN

PROVIDENCE, May 25.—Otis Everett Randall, connected with the teaching staff of the college for more than twenty-six years, was chosen dean of Brown University at a meeting of the trustees today to succeed Alexander Meiklejohn, who resigned to become the president of Amherst. Professor Randall will assume his duties September 1. He is one of the oldest members of the faculty in point of service, and his choice as a successor to Dr. Meiklejohn is a popular one from the undergraduate point of view.

GUILD COMING; SILENT SO FAR

Curtis Guild, Ambassador to Russia, has started for Boston after a few days in Washington where he went for conferences with the State Department, immediately upon his arrival in this country. He will spend today and Sunday in New York with friends and arrive here Monday.

The ex-Governor has not yet declared himself as to the Senatorial race. A decision on his candidacy is expected to be made within a few days. The Guild speech of Ware, chairman of the Committee on Railroads, which reported the Grand Trunk bill, gave notice that he would oppose action on any amendment until they were printed "so the members may know what they are voting on." He intimated that some of the amendments that have been offered are aimed to kill the bill.

The trip to Boston was not a part of Mr. Guild's program till he learned it would be impossible to see President Taft in Washington when he is busy looking after his fences in New Jersey.

EDUCATION AIDED BY BEQUESTS IN H. H. WOOD'S WILL

The will of Hamilton Holton Wood of Brookline, who left an estate estimated at a quarter of a million dollars was filed today in the register's office of the Norfolk Probate Court in Dedham.

The entire estate is left to his widow, Mrs. Alice Gould Wood. The estate is to be held in trust and Mrs. Wood is to receive the income as long as she lives. Upon her death, $40,000 is to be distributed in personal gifts to relatives and friends and $25,000 to the Harcourt-Wood Memorial Library at Derry, N. H. The remainder of the estate is to be divided into four equal parts. Two of these are left to his sister, Mary Wood, of Sutherland, P. Q. The third part goes to McGill University for instituting a course in political economy, and the fourth goes to the Harcourt-Wood Library for the section of industrial lectures.

In case the bequest to McGill University is over $100,000, all over that amount is to be expended for the building of an institution similar to the Harvard Union and a students' dormitory.

FEAR MISSING QUINCY MAN HAS ENDED HIS LIFE

The Quincy police searched the woods, ponds and quarries between Braintree and Quincy for the body of Frank Mosser, a stonecutter, who disappeared Thursday morning. It is feared that he committed suicide. Mosser had been ordered to go to another climate by his doctors. He had been in ill-health for some time. Thursday night he packed his grip, preparing to go the next day. In the morning he had disappeared. Mosser left this note: "Do not ship trunk until I come back. I am doing this alone." It is known he took a razor with him.

WILL POLL LOWELL OPERATIVES ON STRIKE

LOWELL, May 25.—Next week 10,000 cotton operatives affiliated with the I. W. W. will poll a vote on the question as to whether or not they will demand of the Merrimack Manufacturing Company, as the operatives say, to live up to the time-and-a-quarter agreement for overtime at the noon hour on all principal holidays.

The strike-vote will be polled by nationalities on the following nights: Monday, Portuguese and Lithuanians; Tuesday, Poles; Armenians; Syrians; Wednesday, Greeks and Syrians; Thursday, Belgians; Friday, France-Americans and English-speaking.

WOMAN ILL AFTER HOUSE IS STRUCK

MIDDLEBORO, May 25.—Mrs. Will S. Smith of Center, Long Island, Onset, is ill today from shock suffered when her home was struck by lightning last night. The bolt entered through the chimney, ripped up carpet and tore pictures from the wall. It passed out of a rear window. The house caught fire and was damaged to the extent of $2,000. Samuel Eldredge cried to check the fire with a hand extinguisher, but was burned when he tripped and fell, exploding the extinguisher.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS AGAIN ARRAIGN THE GOLDBERGS

Stock Markets Continue Dull, But Stay Firm

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, May 25.—There was a firm tone to the Boston market during the morning, but it was dull and price changes were narrow. During the first hour Amalgamated, Calumet & Arizona and Boston & Corbin were among coppers to sell higher, while there were price recessions in Osceola, Butte & Superior, Santa Fe and Nevada Consolidated.

Calumet & Arizona was among the strongest.

East Boston Land advanced more than a point and was in comparative demand.

The New York market gained strength during the morning and in the second hour there was more buying of the usual railroad and industrial issues. There was not much feature to either the local or the New York market.

Specialties Absorb Interest.

Most of the interest shown in stocks on the New York market today was centred upon a few specialties. People's Gas was the most prominent of these. It opened at 115¾, a gain of 1½ over last night's closing. A Chicago dispatch spoke of a recent change in the People's Gas Company, which was construed as being in accordance with the plan for the eventual consolidation of People's Gas with the Public Service Corporation of Northern Illinois and the last step in the unification and control of gas and electric properties in Chicago.

New York traction stocks ranged fractionally higher. Rubber issues on the whole was on a limited scale, and confined to comparatively few issues. The market opened firm and price changes as a rule had a trend towards higher levels. During the morning Brooklyn Rapid Transit gained 1 point and Interborough Metropolitan preferred went up ¾. Other gains were Steel common ¾; Reading, ¾, Canadian Pacific, ¾, and Union Pacific ¾; Pennsylvania lost ⅜.

The Curb market was steady.

Copper Metal and Mining Notes.

The copper metal market is dull but the price remains unchanged at 12¾ cents a pound. Up to Thursday night the total of exportation for this month was 22,842 tons. The London copper market is closed until Tuesday next. Ore New York is fairly active, with business in both Amalgam and European stocks at next statement day. Cole says: "Operators are dealing with good advance knowledge of statistical conditions." The price of silver has been advanced half a cent a pound to 21¾ cents base. The market for lead is firm at April 8 last. The policy of copper bottoms has also been advanced and the basis is 26 cents a pound.

The gross production of the Utah Copper Company for April was 9,000,000 pounds and the estimated cost was 7¾ cents a pound. On this basis the profit for April was $1,242,500. An increased ore tonnage of 1,000 tons a day is maintained.

Gould in Seaboard Control?

The Cumberland Corporation has sold 139,000 shares of Seaboard Air Line common and 90,000 shares of Seaboard Air Line preferred, nearly one-fifth of the total capitalization of each issue of the property. In New York it is believed that Frank J. Gould is the buyer and that he will have as associates the interests which he represents in the Wabash system. The Seaboard Air Line has about 2,000 miles of trackage and has never paid dividends. It is believed to be above current quotations for the stock.

The Cumberland Corporation, which sells the stock owns the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway, the Virginia Coal Lands in West Virginia and Kentucky. The leading interests in the Cumberland Corporation are Thomas F. Ryan, John D. Rockefeller and Blair & Co., bankers. The Wall Street Journal announced preferred stock will be placed upon a 4 per cent dividend basis.

Financial News in Brief.

It is stated in Philadelphia that John M. Mack, president of Whitecraft Wells & Co., operating a big Canadian brick company, the Pine Grove Brick Company, and the Pine Grove Paving and Construction Company. He is also said to be a director in the Consolidated Gas, Electric Power & Railway Company.

The Cuban Cane Products brought in the Philippines that they will begin shipping there in rice, beans, sugar and tobacco. Rice is the staple food of the people and is now estimated at 50 per cent.

In Chicago the new financing plan for the United States Rubber Company, President Samuel P. Colt announced, appears to be adopted in consequence of earnings sufficient to pay full dividends on the preferred issue because of new combination and preferred, as outlined by him.

The Standard Oil Company is acting in the New York financial district yesterday, when for the first time in many years, it was in a buying mood. Call money was offered at 2 per cent, feeling better and I look good, but you never can tell. Time money was also in good supply at 3 per cent for 60 days and six months.

It is rumored that Underwood Typewriter Company will declare a dividend of 8 per cent on its common, per annum basis. The company's 1912 business is expected to be the largest in its history, the earnings for the first quarter of the year, when almost 11 per cent. was earned upon the common.

The London Stock Exchange closed yesterday on account of the holiday there, and will not reopen until Tuesday, as Monday is Bank Holiday, the first Monday in May. Owing to the closing of the United Gas Stocks Company in London, the Standard Oil Company of New York will market in New York between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 shares of its stock in the market for the year. The April earnings was attributed to suspension of mining in anthracite fields in spite of the April decrease the road reports a ten-months' gain of $2,000,000 over last year. The Lehigh Valley Railway and Missouri Steamship Company of New York, has been sold to the Panama Canal, but will run between Mobile and New York as heretofore. The road has about $500,000 will be spent upon docks and warehouses at Mobile and New York.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is still considering new bonds if it enacts the pending bill regarding Panama Canal tolls.

It is reported in London that the Bank of England will take most of the 4,000,000 of Cape gold due there.

The Boston & Maine is going to buy 4,880 new freight cars and locomotives.

An official of the American Shipbuilding Company, which controls the Cramp shipyards, says more than ever before is being built on the Great Lakes. Within the last year, which ended on June 30, 1911, there were 43 vessels launched, with a gross tonnage of 200,000. Contracts are now on hand for 50 vessels, with a gross tonnage of 300,000. Of these 50 vessels, 30 are steel steamers, 15 are steel barges, and five are wooden steamers. The largest vessel now under construction is a steel steamer of 10,000 tons gross, which is being built for the Pittsburgh Steamship Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation. The vessel will be launched in July, and will be ready for service in September. Another steel steamer of 9,000 tons gross is being built for the Pittsburgh Steamship Company, and will be launched in August. Two steel steamers of 7,500 tons gross each are being built for the Interlake Steamship Company, and will be launched in June and July. Two steel steamers of 7,000 tons gross each are being built for the Lake Erie & Western Transportation Company, and will be launched in June and July. Two steel steamers of 6,000 tons gross each are being built for the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Company, and will be launched in June and July. Two steel steamers of 6,000 tons gross each are being built for the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Company, and will be launched in June and July.

Young Byrnes Quit Law for Locomotive

George Goodrich Byrnes, Yale graduate and son of Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven road, quit in his second year in the Harvard Law School to become a fireman on one of his father's engines because the call of the throttle proved too strong for him to resist. The story came out today. Without a "poll" to land him a job, young Byrnes got one on his own hook and "fired" an engine, just to prove he was fitted for railroading by inheritance.

Three years ago Byrnes was graduated from Yale. The next Fall he took up law at Harvard. Before two years had passed his friends quote him as saying to his father:

"I'm not cut out for the law."

"Better stick," replied the New Haven official.

"No, I'm going to quit," was the son's reply.

Next the father heard of him was when a new fireman named Byrnes won special mention from railroad men for getting a ton of coal a day on his engine. Later the young man went to work in the repair shop at the Montpelier & Wells River railroad, Montpelier, Vt. His father is president of that line. He is still on that repair job.

HOW BENNETT SEES BOSTON

Arnold Bennett, the English fiction writer, in the current number of Harper's Magazine, tells what he thinks of Boston. Mr. Bennett does this in the course of a series of articles he is writing entitled "Your United States."

The author found Boston somewhat "different" from other American cities. He says Boston taxi-cabs have an original, quaint odor. He found, instead of a Bible in his hotel room, a catalogue to the hotel library. He found Boston finished—complete.

But Boston, Mr. Bennett says, is not so English as she thinks. The wall-paintings on the Boston Library staircase was the loveliest modern thing he saw in America. He was entranced with Boston's yacht clubs. He was amazed to find Cambridge without some big hotels and remarks that Longfellow holds his own "as the chief minor poet of the English language."

Following is an excerpt from Mr. Bennett's story of Boston:

(Copyright, 1912, by Harper & Brothers.)

I had received more warnings and more advice about Boston than about all the other cities put together. And, in particular, the greatest care had been taken to permeate my whole being with the idea that Boston was "different." In some ways it proved so to be. One difference forced itself upon me immediately I left the station for the streets—the quaint, original odor of the taxis. When I got to the entirely admirable hotel I found a book in a prominent situation on the writing-table in my room. In many hotels this book would have been the Bible, but here it was the catalogue of the hotel library; it ran to a hundred and eighty-two pages. On the other hand, there was no bar in the hotel, and no smoking-room. I make no comments; I draw no conclusions; I state the facts.

What primarily differentiates Boston from all the other cities I saw is this. It is finished; I mean complete. Of the other cities, while admitting their actual achievement, one would say, and their own citizens invariably do say, "They will be . . . ." Boston is.

How English Are We?

Another leading impression, which remains with me, is that Boston is not so English as it perhaps imagines itself to be. An interviewer (among many) came to see me about Boston, and he came with the fixed and sole notion in his head that Boston was English. He would have it that Boston was English. Worn down by his persistency, I did, as a fact, admit in one obscure corner of the interview that Boston had certain English characteristics. The scare-head editor of the interviewing paper, looking through his man's copy for suitable prey, came across my admission. It was just what he wanted; it was what he was thirsting for. In an instant the scare-head was created: "Boston as English as a muffin." An ideal scare-head! (Mr. Bennett denies he used the word "muffin.")

And still another very striking memory of Boston—indeed, perhaps, the paramount impression—is that it contains the loveliest modern thing I ever saw in America—namely, the Puvis de Chavannes wall-paintings on the grand staircase of the Public Library. The library itself is a beautiful building, but it holds something more beautiful. Never shall I forget my agitation on beholding these unsurpassed works of art, which alone would suffice to make Boston a place of pilgrimage.

Book Shops and Yacht Clubs.

Boston has more book-shops to the acre than any city within my knowledge except Aberdeen (not North Carolina, but Scotland). Its book-shops, however, are as naught to its yacht clubs. And for one yacht club I personally would sacrifice many book-shops. It was an exciting moment in my life when, after further wandering on and off coast roads, and through curving, cobbled, rackety streets, and between thunderous tram-cars and under deafening elevated lines, I was permitted to enter the celestial and calm precincts of the Boston Yacht Club itself, which overlooks another harbor. The acute and splendid nauticality of this club, all fashioned out of an old warehouse, stamps Boston as a city which has comprehended the sea.

Cambridge Minus Hotels.

What struck me first about Cambridge was that it must be the only city of its size and eminence in the United States without an imposing hotel. It is difficult to imagine any city in the United States without at least two imposing hotels, with a barber's shop in the basement and a world's fair in the hall. But one soon perceives that Cambridge is a city apart. In visual characteristics it must be almost the very best, and it will never change with facility. Boston is preeminently a town of traditions, but the traditions have to be looked for. Cambridge is equally a town of traditions, but the traditions stare you in the face.

I rejoiced to see the bust of Longfellow, in spite of the fact that he wrote "The Wreck of the Hesperus." He seems to keep his position as the chief minor poet of the English language.

PHONE GIRLS' UNION NOW NUMBERS 1,200; MEETING ON SUNDAY

A mass meeting of the "Hello Girls'" Union on Sunday afternoon is planned, to be held in Paine Memorial Hall to consolidate the union, which now includes 1,200 girls.

Almost every department of the Boston telephone exchange has now organized, while the management is still considering recognition of the operators' union. Every day new members are enrolled, keeping special clerks busy at the Women's Trade Union League on Warrenton street.

There are four unions at the telephone exchange, including cable splicers, linemen, inside telephone men and operators. Besides these there are four unions outside that have been organized as electrical workers.

HELLO GIRLS, HERE'S SOMETHING FOR YOU.

Every telephone girl in Greater Boston and everyone who knows a telephone girl—young men especially—will be interested in an illustrated article about them which will be printed exclusively in

WHO says rooting is a lost art? A young woman was she young—recently remarked that Boston men were "old-maidish." It began to look that way at Fenway Park, at that, until somebody started them going in the opener with the Athletics yesterday. It was the first time anybody has heard a yelp out of the "fans" in a long while. It won a baseball game.

IT had been suspected that Boston "fans" had the hookworm. They were so quiet-like. The Red Sox and Athletics breathed along until the seventh inning yesterday, with Philadelphia in a 2 to 2 lead, before the "fans" displayed energy displayed itself. The visitors played like clock-work and the Sox needed just a little injection of ginger to start 'em going.

* * *

SOMEBODY got the IDEA in the seventh. He started to root. The IDEA spread. "Heinie" Wagner, who had played perfect baseball, but hadn't stirred out of the clock-work scheme, poked a single over Collins' head and yelped so loud and cavorted so eagerly about first base that when his side-partner, Billy Carrigan, slapped one to Pitcher Houck, "Heinie" was at second before Houck could brow there and the Athletics' pitcher had to be content with nailing Carrigan at first.

* * *

THE crowd yelped on and the studious Mr. Bedient, who held the Athletics to six paltry hits, by the way, dropped a single where Wagner did, scoring "Heinie" with the tying run. This Bedient is some pinch hitter, believe US.

* * *

THE crowd was encouraged—also the Red Sox. Mr. Houck, from whom the Sox had squeezed but two measly hits previously, was away up in the air. Catcher Thomas tried to steady him, but he shook so you could almost hear his bones rattle and Harry Hooper walked on four straight wild balls.

* * *

"HIT 'er out, 'Spoke'!" yelled one Mr. Fan in the $1 seats, and the crowd roared and roared again until "Spoke" had to hit it out to save his life, and he spilled the ball over second base into centerfield, scoring Bedient with the winning run. The crowd, silent up to the seventh, became silent again, conscious that it had won a baseball game. And it did. Nothing but that rooting beat the Athletics.

* * *

ALL of which shows the value of systematic rooting. Don't root until the right psychological moment. It is wasted if you do. Just wait until you see the chance and then yelp till you win. After you've won, quit until the next time. Enough is great; too much is more than enough; a little is "old-maidish."

* * *

PRESIDENT NAVIN of the Tigers is glad of his own struck. It cost him $1,800 in fines and a million in worry, but he's glad. Because he found out that his team is a unit, and he now has reason to believe that they will be unitedly faithful to the cause of winning a pennant. It's worth more'n a million to find out that your employes are a unit, at that. If they now become a unit on the BASEBALL FIELD Navin's $1,800 will be well invested.

* * *

AND it looks like Ty Cobb will return to the game today. Now, if the "Georgia Peach" will only get his head firmly fixed on his shoulders, devote his whole attention to playing baseball, keep his cranium within normal bounds, keep his tongue from splitting out language unfit to hear and curb his ambition to be a one-handed man for the personal satisfaction he can draw out of getting loose his temper, all will be well. If Cobb still thinks he has grievance which must be satisfied that way, he will be expelled the next time he makes a flop.

JOE WOOD or "Buck" O'Brien will be the mound artist for the Red Sox today. They're both in rare form right now. If "Buck" can only hold the form he had Tuesday, when he triumped the "Naps," with three hits, he will be a great baseball pitcher. That is actually O'Brien's real form. That he was by no ought to hitch all of the time.

* * *

THIS BEDIENT lad put up a classy exhibition against the Athletics. The youngster has performed but two years in the big leagues and this is actually his first season regularly on the slab. They "found" him for only six hits and three bases on balls yesterday, and were lucky to score four runs.

* * *

THE home run drive made by Oldring in the fifth, giving the Athletics a lead, was the second one over the left field fence this year. It was like hitting a hit as Hugh Bradley's famous boost.

* * *

IN that inning Bedient fed but four balls to the Athletics. Houck fled to Hooper, Weiss threw out Strunk, Oldring lifted the third ball over the fence and Collins dropped the fourth one into Lewis' hands. That's the way he ought to pitch, copying the most successful twirlers. He wanies as few as he can.

KLING "DOOIN" UP PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 25.—Well, Johnny Kling kept his word and his Pilgrims did win, but he is not going to get away with today's game if "Red" Doolin has anything to say, and while the Phillies' manager isn't saying much, he is angry over the way his boys let the opening game of the series with Boston get away from them.

The Beaning boys seem to play better ball against the Phillies than any other team in the league, both at home and abroad, and they are confident to a man that they will again carry off the honors this afternoon.

The game yesterday looked like easy picking for the locals until the seventh inning, when the visitors scored two runs, tying up the score.

This wasn't so bad, but in the very next session they annexed six more and the game was done as far as Doolin was concerned.

WITH 9 VICTORIES ALREADY, MARQUARD SEEKS A RECORD

NEW YORK, May 25.—With nine consecutive victories behind him, Pitcher Rube Marquard, the $11,000 beauty of the New York Giants, expects to set a new record for games won during the 1912 baseball season. Marquard has won every game he pitched in during the first six weeks of the season. He bows to Grover Cleveland Alexander from the high niche which he holds in the baseball hall of fame.

BROCKTON HAS CHANCE TO LEAD

The Lawrence leaders in the New England League tackle the Worcester club again today and are out to even up the defeat handed to them yesterday by the Burkett team.

First place is also in danger, for, with Brockton winning over Lynn and the Worcester boys repeating yesterday's score, the Shoe City team will jump into the lead.

In the other two games scheduled for today, New Bedford plays at Lowell, while Fall River lines up against Haverhill.

RED SOX STRONG AFTER SECOND

Joe Wood or "Buck" O'Brien will deliver them in the second argument of the Red Sox and Athletics at Fenway Park today. Wood has worked but twice this week, which is about right, for Joe struck his stride Monday and shut out the White Sox, and came back for two innings Thursday to save Eddie Cicotte's bacon.

Jake Stahl may figure that that is enough for the Red Sox star, and if "Buck" O'Brien is still right he may decide to use the "moist ball" tosser. "Buck" struck his real gait Tuesday when he held the "Naps" to three hits and if he can hold up to that form he will give Joe Wood a long run for first honors this season.

Jack Coombs is back in the game again, and he and Lapp were picked as today's battery by Connie Mack. Coombs recovered an old rupture in a game against Washington, but recovered sufficiently to pitch five innings against the White Sox. He believes he is able to go the full route today. He will be supported by Fenway Park "fans," notwithstanding he has made the Bostonians wither many a time in his game 12.

Coupling with orders Donovan went to Navin field to work out. Bill pounced the heavy padding in front of the grandstand. Every time he pitched he had to walk up and recover the ball. This gave him plenty of exercise, but doing the same thing day after day becomes monotonous.

Bill engaged Artie Sheehan as catcher, but Arthur could not find a glove large enough to hold Donovan's fast ones, so Art was forced to retire. Now Bill is again pitching to the heavy padding and getting into excellent shape running up and recovering the ball.

Jimmy Callahan, the surprise of ball dom, possesses the unique record of having played every position on a major league club in one season. It was while he was a member of the Chicago Colts, under the management of Captain Ad Anson, in 1897, that he was used in every position on the team.

It was in 1901 that he and Clarke Griffith, now the team manager of the White Sox, pitched the club to an American League pennant. "Call," outside of his versatility in playing baseball, is probably the most versatile diamond character in other respects. He has promoted running races, like races and bowling tournaments at various times.

He also at one time conducted an exhibition tour of James J. Jeffries when he was heavyweight champion of the world. And to think they afford all this time "Call" is one of the greatest outfielders and managerial proposition in the game!

Harry Salles, the Bucklebery from Higginsport, has not allowed a run in twenty-five innings. By blanking the high-seared Phillies Monday, Sal made it a baker dozo total in number of runless innings pitched. He has won his last three games, pulled up. On Thursday he fanished out two innings.

The Philadelphia Club, with all its powerful eight-hundred hitters, always has been considered a hard nut for southpaws to crack. But Salles smashed Doolin's daisies with ease, and the ball did not seem to be baffled the Superbas and Braves in his recent outs.

TIGER TEAM IN HARVARD GAME

The Batting Order.

HARVARD.	PRINCETON.
Wingate, s.s.	Pendleton, c.f.
Gibson, 3b.	Parker, l.f.
Balson, l.f.	White, s.s.
Potter, 2b.	Sterrett, c.
Clark, 1b	Reed, r.f.
Coon, c.f.	Worthington, 2b.
Reynolds, r.f.	Hinkle, 1b.
Young, c.	Shaw, 2b.
Barthoff or Felton, p.	Lear, p.

With the cheers of Brown's victorious nine still ringing in their ears, the crippled Harvard team lines up against an even more dangerous rival this afternoon in the Princeton team, and while the Tigers have two straight wins to its credit, the Crimson players are out to win today.

The Harvard batting order remains the same as that against Brown, with the exception of the pitcher, and Coach Sexton has not made up his mind whether to put Felton in or use Barthoff again.

BASEBALL NOTES.

Josh Clarke, recently canned by Kansas City, played previously with the Toledo, Columbus, St. Paul, Cleveland and Boston National teams. He is now trying to get on with some United States league team.

Willis Butler, former Nashville infielder, who failed with Cleveland and later with Toledo, seems to have got his stride on the Pacific Coast and is going great guns.

Russ Ford's efficiency is believed to have been increased 25 per cent, by the return of Ed Sweeney to active baseball. The former Cracker catcher is the only living man who has ever had any luck backing catching the former Cracker pitcher.

You never can tell about Russ Ford—he's such a comedian. The other day in a game in New York, he stole second cleanly on Ted Easterly, and when the peg to second went wild he circled the base. This in Ford's third stolen base since he has been in the major league.

Don't anybody in Georgia overlook the good work of one Georgia boy in the big leagues—Colonel I. Wingo of the Cardinals. That lad is catching most of the games for Roseahan's team and is batting .341.

Rube Waddell is suffering from a rush of old red eye to the pitching arm and his baseball days are numbered.

TODAY'S BATTING ORDER

RED SOX

HOOPER, r.f.—Harper is faster than ever right now. His specialty is beating out infield hits. Watch for him to "pull out" on Houck today.

YERKES, 2b.—Steve has improved since his return. He smashed a double off Lefty Russell yesterday, scoring and helping draw the "$12,000 beauty" to the woods. Steve fielded perfectly and looks good now.

SPEAKER, c.f.—Tris is a bull on the team now. He moves along on everything, hits fielding grounders well, seems to have all his stride again. He drove in two of the Sox four runs yesterday and scored one by beating it.

LEWIS, l.f.—"Duffy" is hitting hard since he moved to the "cleanup" place. He is now batting .300 for the season and is batting like a fool. "Duffy" hasn't shown so much fielding form, allowing lately as he is capable of.

GARDNER, 3b.—Larry is playing the best third base on the American league. He wings them over with hair-raising speed and accuracy. He is hitting in fiendly form and is fast on the bases.

BRADLEY, 1b.—Hugh plays a clean first base now, covering lots of ground, but is sometimes caught in a pinch on throwing. He still has a disposition to hit under the ball and aim to the left always, so that the fielders have him sized up.

WAGNER, s.s.—"Heinie" gets them cleanly, as always, and his throws improve every day. Watch his fast, accurate pegs to first on quick recovery. Also, Wagner has become one of the most timely hitters in the game and is surely on the bases.

CARRIGAN, c.—Bill is up to his old game, screening all there is out of the other side. If he catches today, he'll get a chance to show his wares in the box. Bill's a headwork backstop, a fast, reliable, hard-hitting game and throwing accurately.

WOOD, p.—Joe was booked to pitch today. He is in top-notch form. He shut out the White Sox, 2 to 0, Monday, holding them to four hits. On Thursday he was relieved in the seventh by "Buck" O'Brien after he had pitched two innings with no runs. "Buck" is also in good form, nobody batting Cleveland to three hits. "Buck" has had a long rest and may be picked today.

ATHLETICS

STRUNK, l.f.—He is not hitting at his usual pace just now, but is fielding with his old-time judgment and nothing seems to pass him.

OLDRING, c.f.—He has his eye on the ball. Yesterday he made a marvelous put-out, and lifted one over the left-field fence, giving the Athletics a lead in the fifth.

COLLINS, 2b.—Eddie is as fast as ever. He robbed Yerkes of a hit with a one-hand catch in the air yesterday, and spaced two that looked like near-hits.

BAKER, 3b.—The "home-run kid" smashes them out just like he always did. A double over right field there scored Oldring in the first yesterday and Baker also lifted a triple near the centre-field bleachers in the eighth.

MURPHY, r.f.—His throwing arm is good again. He fielded Hooper's hounder yesterday, unless you can call waiting for two of his team's three bases on balls a feat.

MORVEN, 1b.—"Stuffy" made a great one-handed catch yesterday and also saved Collins from an error on a high throw in an effort to double Bradley in the first.

BARRY, s.s.—Barry is covering as much ground as ever, but is not hitting up to world championship form just now. Or, perhaps the pitching has improved.

LAPP, c.—He was counted on to relieve Thomas behind the bat today, although Connie Mack has more confidence in Thomas' ability to hit the Red Sox pitchers.

COOMBS, p.—He was picked to twirl today. He re-opened a rupture recently in a Washington game, but pitched five innings with reasonable success against the White Sox. He says he is all right again and was eager to get into today's game.

Brockton Youngster New Baseball Star

BROCKTON, May 25.—The eyes of the entire New England League circuit are focussed on the youngest member in the league, Malcolm Berry of this city, who is playing a sensational game at first base for the Brockton team.

Berry has played in every game and leads the league in batting. His present mark is about .425, and the manner in which he is swatting the sphere every day indicates that he will retain the .400 mark for some time.

Barry is a natural ball player, swings freely and lands on the ball hard.

He was picked up to the "bushes" by John W. McCue, one of the owners of the local club.

FREE TICKETS TO BALL GAMES

Free tickets to the games of the Greater Boston Baseball League.

This is the offer which every boy and girl can will have an opportunity to take advantage of in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. On the sporting pages of the Sunday AMERICAN will be found a free ticket, which will admit the youngsters to any game played in the bustling little league, except Saturday and holiday games.

Nearly every fan is interested in the Greater Boston League. This newest of baseball organizations has surprised the followers of the great national game by the fast article of baseball they are putting up at the present time. And the race in the league is a hot one.

Every game played so far has been filled with the real fireworks. There are no one-sided games in this league. Every player is fighting it out tooth and nail right up to the finish. The result has been warm competition, close games and great excitement among the spectators.

The league is composed of the best semi-professional players in this part of the country. Men nearly every team is strengthened by the addition of some crack players who made marks in some fast leagues. Many of the teams have on their roster players who shone in the New England, Eastern, Western and even the American and National Leagues. These players have helped to inspire the other youngsters, until all the teams are now well balanced and playing in top form.

The AMERICAN is making it possible for thousands of youthful fans to get acquainted with this sterling league of fast teams. You will have your opportunity tomorrow. Look for the ticket admitting boys and girls to the game on any of the league's grounds without cost.

The Greater Boston League teams comprise Dorchester, South Boston, Everett, Chelsea, Medford-Malden, Somerville and Lynn. The ticket in Sunday's AMERICAN will admit to any of these grounds

SIX G. B. L. TEAMS IN DOUBLE TIE

With the six teams in the Greater Boston League tied for second place, interesting games are on the schedule for today and a general shakeup is due before nightfall.

Dorchester's win over the Everett-Chelsea leaders yesterday at the Dunbarton avenue grounds, the victory of South Boston over Lynn at the Locust-street ground and the defeat of Malden-Medford at Somerville brought about a triple tare for first place and a three-cornered fight for second position.

Everett vs. Medford in Feature Game

BIG DAY FOR THE SCHOOLBOY NINES

School baseball will attract a bit of attention this afternoon. More than twenty games are on the schedule and some good battles are anticipated. But a few league games will be played, but those played are of great importance.

Everett High plays Medford High at Everett in a Suburban League contest, and this game should attract a good sized crowd. Everett has a comfortable lead in the league but must win several games before it is sure of the championship.

Everett has already outclassed all the other teams in the league, but the boys will have to play their best game in order to win today. Johnny Murray will appear Joe Fahey in the box and this should be a good battle.

Both Everett and Medford are playing a fast fielding game and are almost sure of giving their pitchers good support. Everett has some clever infielders in Jones, Brickley and Morando, while Medford has some good men in Frazier, Condon, Lawless and Twombly.

The Everett players have been stinging the ball harder than any team in the league this season and this has won many games. Everett will probably outhit Medford this afternoon but the game is sure to be a hard fought one.

Somerville and Melrose clash in a Suburban League game at Somerville and the Red and Blue is picked as a winner. Somerville has been playing good ball during the past couple of weeks, and, with Whittaker working right again, Somerville is likely to beat a lot of teams.

Mechanic Arts will endeavor to stop the long winning streak of Waltham High. The Watch City boys have been having things pretty nearly their own way in most of the games this season, but Captain Gleason will lead his warriors on to the diamond determined to win. "Rollo" Fagan will pitch for Waltham and he is confident of winning, as he always gets good fielding and batting support.

Harry Jesseau, English High, will go to Salem and battle with the high school nine of that town. Boston College High plays Dorchester Polo at Dudley. Boston Latin will meet the Bridgewater Normal School team at East Bridgewater, and Dorchester plays Malden at Malden. All of these games should be interesting battles as most of the teams are about evenly matched.

U. S. MARKSMEN WIN BIG MATCH

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, May 25.—The Yankee marksmen showed their superiority in the international shooting competition by defeating the Argentine team 4,729 to 4,508 points.

Five marksmen representing each nation participated in the international match, which was fired at a range of 350 metres (about 385 yards). Each of the men fired 120 shots (forty standing, forty kneeling and forty prone), and the highest possible score was 6,000 points.

The five men who fired in the international match were selected from Captain S. W. Wise, Massachusetts National Guard; Corporal John Kneubel, Seventy-fourth New York National Guard; Captain W. P. Hyde, Tennessee National Guard; Sergeant C. N. Schriver, United States Marine Corps; Sergeant C. A. Lloyd, United States Marine Corps; John W. Hession, Bridgeport, Ct., and Lieutenant William C. Stoll, Twenty-ninth United States Infantry.

Cy Young Says: "I'll Come Back"

McClure, Multnomah Club, Portland, 1,500 metres.

Kelly, University of southern California, 110-metre hurdles.

Smithson, Los Angeles cmattached), 110-metre hurdles.

Horine, Olympic Club, San Francisco, running high jump.

Rose, Olympic Club, San Francisco, shot put.

Bolish, Multnomah Club, Portland, pole vault and javelin, conditionally.

Anderson, Stanford University, discus and hammer throws.

Shattuck, University of California, running broad jump.

James Dunsbee, of Los Angeles.

Interscholastic Games at the Stadium

EXETER PICKED TO WIN RECORD MEET

A record-breaking crowd of schoolboy athletic followers is expected to travel out to the Harvard Stadium this afternoon and root for the favorites in the annual Harvard interscholastic games. A great array of schoolboy athletes will compete and it is expected that it will be one of the most successful sets of track games ever held.

Exeter is the logical favorite, but by no means is the New Hampshire school conceded a victory. The Exonians will be forced to the limit by Worcester Academy and Powder Point will also start more than a little trouble.

All of the athletes entered are in their very best condition and prepared to perform at their top notch speed and it would not be surprising if several of the records of the meet were broken.

The 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash and the running high jump will be watched with great interest. It is expected that the hundred will be won in even heights and Rice is expected to perform the furlong in 21.35 seconds, which would be wonderful running for a school boy. The fight for the first place in the running high jump between J. Oliver Johnson of the Worcester Academy and Wesley Olin Jr. of New York will also be an interesting feature of the event.

Exeter has a well balanced team and hopes to land first place. Tomlinson is their man in the dashes and he is picked to run second in both the 100 and the 220 events. Dougherty is the strong man in the longer runs. Some good men are entered in the hurdles and in the field events.

Worcester Academy hopes to duplicate its performance of last year and many pick them as the winners of the schoolboy classic. Worcester has some good men in nearly all of the events and many points will be picked up. Johnstone is picked to win the running high jump, Cowan is likely to win the 880-yard event, Bosworth is a favorite in the mile run and Sharp may place in the dash.

Powder Point is likely to spoil many calculations. Rice of Powder Point is picked to win the 100 and 220-yard events and several other athletes from the Duxbury School should shine.

Billy Nearns of Legion School, the former Boston English High athlete, will probably take a place in several events and win many points single handed.

Dates Arranged for Harvard Title Golf

The Harvard University golf championship title year will be decided at the Woodland Golf Club at Auburndale. On Monday next the qualifying round of eighteen holes will be played, the competition being open to all students of the college.

Play will be from scratch and the sixteen players making the best gross scores will be paired for match play. All rounds must be played off before Saturday, June 1.

No matches, however, will be played on Memorial Day, as the Woodland Club has a tournament on that date.

TROOP C IN FIELD WITH AMATEUR NINE

A fast team will represent Troop C' First Squadron Cavalry, M. V. M., this Summer, and would like to arrange games with any strong amateur teams offering favorable inducements for Saturday afternoon and holiday games. Games with military teams preferred. Manager Q. M. Sergeant Daniel Sweetland, care Troop C, No. 200 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

UVANNI BEATS BATTEN.

UTICA, N. Y., May 25.—Joe Uvanni of Troy defeated Pete Batten of San Francisco in a ten-round bout before the Oneida County A. A. in the semi-final. Eddie Ketchel, brother of the late Stanley Ketchel of Grand Rapids, shaded Jack Cotton.

COLEMAN WINNER.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—Despite the fact that Johnny Willetts had the weight on Tommy Coleman in the final bout at the Nonpariel A. C., the latter gained an easy victory over Willets, who was made to look very foolish several times during the milling.

Olympic Team Picked June 10

Athletes, ambitious of becoming members of the American team, which will compete in the Olympic games at Stockholm, will know their fate at high noon June 10. This will be in the nature of hurry up selection, as the two principal tryouts will be held on Saturday, June 8, at Cambridge, Mass., and at the Northwestern University field at Evanston, Ill. The trials on the Pacific coast have already been held.

It is pointed out by the American Olympic committee that only four days remain in which to enter for the games. Every athlete who expects to compete in the trials must have his entry blank in by May 25. The Swedish Olympic committee must be in possession of the entries June 14.

The American committee has been permitted to send in as many entries by mail as it pleases, with the reservation that those picked in the trials will be called ahead of the closing date. The complete committee completes that up to date entries received do not cover near as many men as are known to be trying for the games.

As the finances of the committee is beginning to look more promising, the chances are that a record team will be sent. The next two weeks will be devoted by the members of the committee to a "clean up," etc. It is hoped that the $60,000 will be collected.

Colby and Bates in Tennis Finals

BANGOR, Me., May 25.—The Maine Intercollegiate Tennis tournament final will be played off today, with Colby and Bates battling for the honors.

Bowdoin and Maine were eliminated from the championship doubles in the opening matches.

The semi-finals resulted:

Woodman and Tomlins, Bates, beat Cushman and Faulkner, Colby, 6—4, 6—2. Gingras and Morse, Colby, beat Nickerson and Alley, Bates, 6—3, 6—4.

The preliminary singles were started. Bird of Maine beat Woodman of Bates, 6—4, 6—2. Gingras of Maine beat Cushman of Colby, 6—2, 1—6, 11—9.

BOSTON WRESTLER WINS.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., May 25.—"Cyclone" Burns of Boston won from Jack McPhee of Worcester in straight falls, getting the first fall in seventeen minutes with a head scissors and toe hold and the second in nine minutes thirty seconds with a full body hold. Frita Hanson won from Jack Collins of Worcester.

THREE FOR DECATHLON.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Mongini, a University of Chicago student; Brundage of the Chicago A. A. and Schobinger, University of Illinois, successfully passed the tryouts for the Olympic meet held on the Northwestern University Athletic Field for the decathlon event.

New English Shells for the Yale Crews

NEW HAVEN, May 25.—The two new English racing shells, built especially for the Yale eights next month, have arrived in New York on the Red Star Mesaba.

Head Coach James Rodgers of the Yale crew, looked them over and arranged for their shipment to this city.

The crews will leave here for Gales Ferry a week from Sunday, but the new shells are the first English shells that Yale has had in a number of years.

Yankee Runners Win Second Place

TORONTO, May 25.—A. E. Wood and Charles Hefferon, the Red team, were the winners in the fifteen-mile relay race at the Island here.

The Lukee team, Quest and Crooks, just beat Longboat and Shrubb for second place. The Indian team, Allan and Red Hawk, were disfanced or nearly a mile. The pace was hot throughout. Wood making one mile in 4m. 40s.

Harvard and U. B. C. Crews in Big Regatta

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 25.—A record crowd was on hand early today to look over the rival crews entered in the various events of the great regatta on the Schuylkill River today.

There are ten races on the program, the most important of which will be that for Junior collegiate eight-oared shells.

The crews entered in this race are those of the Crescent Boat Club (second), Harvard University Boat Club, Columbia University Rowing Club, University of Pennsylvania and Princeton Rowing Association.

Another important race will be that for the stewards' cup between eights of the Union Boat Club, Boston, and the Columbia University Rowing Club. The Navy crew was also entered in this event, but it is doubtful if they will start.

The distance of the race will be one mile 550 yards.

Mrs. Earle Winner In Golf Title Match

NEW YORK, May 25.—Mrs. Victor M. Earle of Englewood is the new women's metropolitan golf champion, which she won by defeating Miss Marion Hollins of Westbrook. In the final round of the annual tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association at the Englewood Country Club. The margin was 6 and 4.

Miss Hollins was visibly nervous at the start, for the importance of the match seemed to dawn on her after she drove off. Mrs. Earle, too, was in high tension, and played her shots rapidly.

JOHNSON SURE OF WIN.

CHICAGO, May 25.—"John Arthur Johnson will bring home the bacon before the 15th round." That was Champion Jack Johnson's final word as he prepared to take a train early today for Las Vegas, N. M., where he will fight Jim Flynn, July 4.

Travers and Kirkby Play for Golf Title

NEW YORK, May 25.—Jerome D. Travers of Upper Montclair, former National champion and present holder of the Metropolitan and New Jersey titles, and Oswald Kirkby, the Englewood player, met in the 36-hole final round final today in the championship tournament of the Metropolitan Golf Association at the Baltusrol Golf Club.

Travers advanced to the decisive circuit through his defeat of his old rival, Findlay S. Douglas of Nassau, by 3 and 2.

Kirkby first eliminated Walter J. Travis of Garden City by 1 up and Dudley Wallace Sinclair of the Home Club, 2 and 1.

Farrell Named to Succeed Kraenzlin

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 25.—Stephen J. Farrell of this State University has been appointed to succeed Dr. Alvin W. Kraenzlin as athletic and physical director of the University of Michigan, who has tendered his resignation, to take effect at the end of the college year.

The resignation is said to have been due to the illness of Mrs. Kraenzlin, who has contracted residence abroad for some time. Dr. Kraenzlin will accompany his wife.

ONE FOR BOXING CLUB.

NEW YORK, May 25.—In the Supreme Court the State Athletic Commission scored a point against the National Sporting Club of this city. Justice Gerard vacated the injunction which the club obtained restraining the commission from preventing boxing bouts being held in the clubhouse until the appellate division had reviewed the action of the commission in revoking the club's license.

Winnipeg's Athletes Assisted by Council

WINNIPEG, May 25.—That Winnipeg will send home one of her foremost athletes to Montreal to compete in the Olympic elimination trials on June 8 was practically assured on Monday, when the city council voted the sum of $400 toward the expenses of Jim Worthington, a member of the M. A. A. A., consisting of D. McCuaig, A. B. Mitchell, Jack Wright, D. McCuaig and Lou Wardle, attended the meeting of the council and explained the objects of the trip. The result was a splendid response by the city fathers to the motion, instructing the board of control to assist in the matter to the extent of the expenses of the trip. Mr. McCuaig and Mr. Mitchell both spoke in favor of the motion, and there will be no trouble whatever in raising the balance of the $750 or $800 which will be required.

FREDERICKTON WINS.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 25.—In the opening games of the Maine and New Brunswick Professional League here, Fredericton defeated Marathons of this city, 9 to 8 and 15 to 3.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Pa was awful good last nite. He showed sum ladies & gentlemen the evils of gambling. I guess there wont be any more card galms in our house.

The way it wuz was this way: Pa was just putting on his slippers & his bathrobe after dinner weh Ma sed Husband, we are going to have company aggrum tonite. Aggein (write) sed Pa. Yes, sed Ma, aggrum tonite.

Oh, well, sed Pa, oh well. Pa sighed & looked kinda of sad.

What are you sighing about? sed Ma. These is perfectly lively peeple, Mister & Mieses Lind & two of Mieses Lind's guri freeds. They are cumming up to play poker.

To play what? Sed Pa, to play poker, sed Ma. Have you anny objeckshuns? It is only going to be a little galm that Mieses Lind has invented, she calls it the mill galm. Each of us is to talk one hundred cents' worth of chips, but we only pay one tenth for the chips, ten cents. One tenth of a cent is a mill, said Ma, dount you understand?

Then Pa sighed sum moar. Yes, I understand he sed. Wen does the orgy begin? Jest when Pa was talking there came a knock at the door & in came Mister & Mieses Lind & her two guri freeds. Mieses Lind & the gurls was pritty, but Mister Lind was awful litel alongside of Pa, he looked kind of scared. All of them started asking stie away wen the galm was going to beegin, & Pa sed to me Bobbie, I want you to sit neer my chair this evening & watch this galm they call the "mill galm." Watch my hands, sed Pa, & note the way I play them. You are growing up, Pa sed, & sum day you will be a man. I dount want to ever think that my son will become a poor poker player. All the mouny I make, Pa sed, I am going to put in yare litel pig bank, & then the galm began.

There was only one good playier in the galm, that was Pa. He worked harder than the rest, beekaus he had to work harder. He had one pack of cards on the tabel to talk care of, & a nother pack beehind his coat tails on the chair, & a other pack on his knee, I saw it all the time. Orst in a while Pa wud not stay in the pot, they called it the pot, & every time he wasent in the pot he was all the time fixing up the deck on his knee or the deck beehind his coat tails. I knew it was kind of coarse work, even if I am only a litel boy, but they all suddeet see it, & after the galm was neerly over Pa had most of the chips. The ladies was all gitting kind of mad at Pa & at each other, & Ma got the maddest of all, beekaus every time Pa dealed the cards she wud have a good hand & Pa wud have a better one.

Wen the galm was over nobody sed a word except Pa. He took his sum piece of chips, a dollar a pile, & sed to the banker: Here, Miss Polly, cash these in. It is just nine hundred mo...

So the lady gave Pa ninety cents & put it in my pig bank, but if Pa ever needs any part of it we can have it, beekaus he is a good fellow.

In Darkest Africa

THE editor called the new special writer up to his desk.

"Young man," he said, severely, "we don't need a few exaggerations, but you have been going a little too strung."

In what way, sir?" asked the surprised pen-pusher.

"Why, in your article on Captain Blank's in the jungle you state that immediately after dispatching the ferocious lion he called for a taxi. Now, any freedom's would know that there are no taxicabs in Africa."

"I didn't allude to a taxicab, sir."

"You didn't?"

"No. I meant a taxidermist, so that he might get the king of the beasts stuffed."

MRS. GREATON'S AWFUL EXPERIENCE

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Natick, Mass. — "I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life, if it will help others you may publish my letter." — MARION SWEET GRAHAM. No. 1 Jefferson St., Natick, Mass.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-Page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today. Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

And All for the Sake of Vanity

Hunting a Husband

No. 5—The Widow Again Meets Her Youthful Suitor and Is Happy

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water

WOMAN'S intuition is proverbial, and Helen Robbins had her share of it.

It may have been this occult power, and, after some moments of rapid thinking, determined that her own interests and those of her children should not be sacrificed to her wealthy relative's fancy for a pretty widow. She could not prevent his going to Beatrice's home, but she could arrange to have another man ill her field of vision so completely that the older and less attractive adulter would be relegated to the background.

With this aim in view, she called up Beatrice and asked her to accompany her and Mr. Robbins to the theatre the following Saturday night, and, receiving her assent, she telephoned to Robert Maynard and asked him to make a fourth in their little party. He accepted promptly, but asked "Who is to be the fourth? Your niece?"

"Oh, no!" exclaimed Mrs. Robbins. "You were very kind to devote yourself to the child at my dinner, but I would not think of imposing her upon you a second time within a fortnight. Mrs. Minor is to accompany us. I wish you knew her better. She is really a most unusual woman, with a beautiful mind. And, by the way, she likes you very much."

The man laughed piteously, his vanity gratified.

"I am glad to hear that, for I found her charming."

So the matter was arranged, and when Beatrice stepped from the elevator in her apartment house on Saturday night, having been informed by the ball boy that Mr. and Mrs. Robbins were waiting for her, she was astonished and pleased to see that Robert Maynard was with them.

"Why, how delightful!" she exclaimed cordially. "We are a nice quartette, aren't we?"

A Merry Time

It was natural that Robert should act as her escort, and he was so pleasant, and Helen and her husband were so jolly, that Beatrice assured herself that she was going to have a good time.

She was not disappointed. The play was well acted and interesting, and between the acts—those difficult and boring periods—Robert Maynard proved himself a good comrade, and the conversation was brilliant and spirited. As the curtain fell upon the last act he turned to his friends and insisted that they should accompany him to a restaurant for supper. Helen looked at her husband for his consent, and he gave his approval of the suggestion. Beatrice hesitated with apparent indecision.

"This is such fun!" she sighed to her escort as they followed the older couple through the brilliantly-lighted streets. "It is a long time since I have had such a spree as this, for of late I have gone out very little. In fact, I have had nobody to take me anywhere."

"And I," said the man, looking down into her face, "have not had anyone to take anywhere, ever"—with a sigh—"if I had had the heart to go."

Beatrice wished that he would forget for a while his dead wife and think only of her, then she remembered that he had but sold in substance just what she had remarked a moment before. Probably he thought she was regretting her husband and he resented the regret his wife. After all had his marriage been any happier than hers?

They had reached the restaurant, and he, noticing her grave face and preoccupied demeanor, checked her for a moment as she started to enter the revolving doors.

"Let's make a bargain," he suggested quickly and smilingly. "For this evening let's promise each other to think only happy thoughts. Will you agree to it?"

"Indeed I will!" laughed his companion. "I shall be glad of the chance to forget all the disagreeable things that have ever happened."

"Such a pleasant thing is happening to me tonight in being with you that I shall have no trouble in forgetting everything else," he said softly, stepping aside to allow her to enter before him.

Looking Her Best

His words and tone brought a new light to her eyes and a brighter color to her cheeks, and more than one person turned to look at the pretty woman as she crossed the broad corridor and entered the dining room. Life seemed transformed for her tonight.

The strains of the orchestra filled her with delicious emotion, and her past, with its bitter disappointments, and her present every-day existence, with its struggles to economize and its sordid commonplaceness, fell from her, and she felt as if she were standing on the threshold of a new and beautiful world.

Helen, seeing the result of her machinations, rejoiced, and her satisfaction made her more agreeable than ever, while her husband, noting her mood, fitted his to it. They were a merry party, and it was, on the whole, a satisfactory evening for all concerned. The wands were delicious, and Robert Maynard ordered them and the champagne with an abandon that made Beatrice wonder if he had not more money than had the average man of her acquaintance.

As she thought this, she breathed a sigh of content, then caught herself up sharply as she appreciated that she was once again contemplating the possibility of Maynard's asking her to marry him. She would not allow her fancies to stray in this direction, for, perhaps, after all, this devoted manner of his was only his way with women to whom he chanced to know. The thought brought with it a pang, and a heavy look came to her face, which observed it, and, leaning toward her, asked suddenly:

"Are you forgetting your bargain?"

Beatrice started guiltily, then laughed. "What bargain?" she queried.

"We promised to ignore this evening the unhappy past, you know," chided the man.

"I was not thinking of it!" declared Beatrice.

"What were you thinking of?" asked Maynard.

But she laughed and shook her head. "I can't tell you!" she exclaimed.

"Will you tell me sometime?" he urged.

"Perhaps."

"When?"

The woman looked at him, moved by a sudden impulse.

"When I know you well enough to find that I was mistaken in what I was thinking!" she promised.

"What are you two conspiring about?" demanded Helen suddenly. She and her husband had been deciding in low tones that it was time for absent-minded people to turn their faces homeward. "What ever it is, it has absorbed you so deeply that you have not noticed the hour. It is so late we must go home!" And rising from her seat, she and her husband started towards the door, while the other couple reluctantly followed them.

A Bachelor's Diary

Disgusted with Josephine, He Decides to Wed Mary Playter

By MAX

APRIL 9.—I did not know that time could drag as slowly as it has dragged since I had that quarrel with Josephine.

I have heard it said that the hands of the clock never move as slowly as when there is some one lying dead in the house. I believe there are times when they move even slower, and that is when one is eating his heart out over love that has gone wrong, just as I am doing.

Nothing pleasant to dream of when I fall asleep at night, and nothing to look forward to when I awake in the morning. Just a dull round of grey days and grayer nights, to be measured off, not an hour at a time, but minute by minute. If I were well enough to get to work it would be easier to forget, but here I lie, half sick physically, and entirely sick in mind and heart. Too sick to work, and not too sick to think! Heaven, but that would be a pleasant stage of illness, to be too sick to think!

When I try to read, the words all vanish from the page and leave in the centre the smiling, mocking face of Josephine.

"I will take Dribbles," her lips seem to say. And that was what she said when I told her she must choose between Dribbles and me. I was mad to make her decide. Dear! I know it, but I had cause to be mad. Here I lay, a physical wreck due to her reckless driving of my automobile.

And when she came to see me she came in Dribbles' car. And I told her she must choose between us.

What Are They, Anyhow?

What are women, anyhow? Fiends incarnate? Sometimes I think Josephine is. She loved me and petted me and cried over me till one day, melting like so much ice before a blaze, made my will, leaving everything I had to her. After that she didn't come for three days, and then she came with Dribbles.

I try to read and cool by pitching the book across the room. Then I try to plan work for the office, for the doctor hopes I can get back there next week. I get out a notebook and make memoranda of a little improvement in this department, a strengthening of that, increased expenditures here and greater economy there, and all the time while I am trying to concentrate my mind on my figures the blamed old clock is ticking louder and louder, as if it were determined to force itself on my consciousness and finally compel me to forget all else.

I am reminded of poor little Paul Dombey, to whom the big clock at Dr. Blimber's School said over and over again, "Time is the little child! How is the little child?"

This clock says to me, "Where is Jo-se-phine? Where is Jo-se-phine, Jo-se-phine?" so loud and insistent I wonder Forbes doesn't notice it when he comes in to wait on me.

I get five or six notes a day from Josephine, all begging me to see her and let her explain. Explain! I hate the word. Only those who are weak or false resort ever use it.

But through all my anger and resentment there runs the wild longing to have Josephine back in my arms, and some day I know this great longing will sweep away every good reason I have built up why I should never see her again.

Objections to her conduct, her flippant ways, her flirtations, her manner of seeking to attract the admiration of the men, her little deceits, all her little mercenary tricks—everything to which a man of honor would object in one whom he wishes to marry—still are driven like so many straws before a flood when I succumb to that longing.

I build up a barricade against her, and have only to give permission to let her enter that door, and every last barrier will fall! We men boast of our strength. We are like so many houses built of cards before the women we love.

There are many rings at the door during the day, and my heart goes mad with the hope it is Josephine. "I won't see her! I won't see her!" I say over and over while waiting for Forbes to return from answering the door. When he tells me it is a messenger from the office or one of my old friends I want to turn my face to the wall and weep in my disappointment. Yet I don't believe I would have seen her if Josephine had returned saying she was there.

He tells me several times during the day that she is looking for me at the telephone, and, though I am able to hobble that far by leaning on to chairs, I tell him to say I am asleep and cannot be disturbed, or that I am not able to go to the telephone today.

I know he suspects something is wrong. I don't care if he does. I wouldn't care if it were shouted from the housetops.

Between Two Fires

If she were in my arms this minute there is nothing I wouldn't forgive or forget, yet I know that my future peace of mind and contentment will be forever gone if I take her back. It would be hell with her, and oh, how well I know it is hell without her. The man who takes his choice between two hells always chooses the worse one, and I am afraid for myself if I have a choice.

I know my weakness and despise myself for it. But what can I do? There seem to be two of me. One beseeches and humbles himself, says, "Forgive her, forgive little ways, the blueness of her eyes, and thrill me with the longing to hold her in my arms again.

The other, cool, deliberate and cautious, says, "Take care, Max. Don't be a fool!" There is only one thing for me to do if I value my happiness, and that is to escape.

I can't run off! That would be a spectacle to make the gods laugh; a grown, staid business man like me running like a frightened boy from a girl like Josephine.

But there is one thing I CAN do: I can marry someone else!

I have heard there is no protection for a man like a wife. I never needed protection more than I need it right now. I will Marry, and I Will Marry Mary Playter.

Good, sensible, cheering, unselfish, blessed Mary Playter! With Mary Playter as my wife I can find peace of mind and happiness again. It will be like steering my craft into a safe harbor after a stormy voyage. Awkward here and there by stirring lights set out on a rocky coast to shipwreck and drown whom he chanced to know. The thought brought with it a longing, and a heavy look came to her face, which observed it, and, leaning toward her, asked suddenly:

"Are you forgetting your bargain?"

Beatrice started guiltily, then laughed. "What bargain?" she queried.

A Record That's Indelible

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"The Moving Finger writes, and, having writ,
Moves on; nor all your Piety nor Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it."
—Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

If every girl's first thought when she awoke in the morning were that every word, every thought, every deed, of that day were to be written in ink that the ages would not indelible, what a difference it might make!

She would curb her temper. She would restrain every inclination to be impatient. If her first thought is a selfish thought, a more generous second thought would prevail.

She would check every impulse to be narrow. She would overcome every petty desire for self. She would become better, truer, higher, nobler, quicker to feel, and much more constant to retain, all tenderness and pity, all self-denial and devotion.

Ah, and more, if she but realized with the beginning of every day that the "Moving Finger writes," and that it is upon her there rests the responsibility of what it writes, how to it good or evil.

It is with a desire to awaken her to that realization that this is written.

The Moving Finger is a chronicler never swayed by prejudice, mercy or passion. It is inexorable. It writes what one DOES, not what one INTENDS to do.

On its pages the little self-denials that are hidden from the world shine forth in luminous text. They rank as high or higher than the great deeds done under the inspiration of the blare of trumpets and the world's applause.

The Moving Finger Knows

The world may not know of it when a girl gives up her greatest desire because the giving up means a help to others, but the Moving Finger knows, and its writing is indelible. The applause of the world soon dies away. The indelible writing of the Moving Finger always stands.

Therefore, because she is denied the opportunities to do great things one should not slight the little acts of devotion and kindness.

A knowledge that these count for more when the Great Book is finally balanced, should be firmly fixed in every girl's heart and head. This knowledge, and this knowledge alone, will help her to arise above the depression that sometimes attends lack of recognition.

She will care little that others do not know of what she has done, knowing that, if she knows she has done her best, little else counts.

She has given the Moving Finger something to write of which she will never be ashamed. And who could do more?

Nothing is ever written that will cause great repentance, humiliation or shame, if every thought, every act, every word originates in a spirit of kindness.

Said Alice Carr:

"For whatever men say in their blindness,
In spite and the fancies of youth,
There is nothing so kindly as kindness,
And nothing so royal as truth."

Kindness and Truth

Just two little words to remember and the Moving Finger will write nothing during the day that will make a girl's head toss restlessly on her pillow that night, and these two words are "Kindness" and "Truth."

A little thought for others all the time; a little repression of self; a little caring for the other girl's hurts, and forgetting of one's own little pains; a little for the troubles of the girl whose love affair has come awry; a little helpful understanding and sympathy. All these and more make that writing of the Moving Finger a record as beautiful as any noble sentiment ever done in illuminated text.

Just a little remembering all the time, and when night comes and one looks back over the deeds of the day, honestly and frankly, there will be no will of neglect.

Just remember all the time:

"Nor all your Piety nor Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it."

Develop Your Bust in 15 Days

A Full Firm Bust is Worth More to a Woman than Beauty

I don't care how thin you are, how old you are, how fallen and flaccid are the lines of your figure or how flat your chest is, I can give you a full, firm, youthful bust quickly, that will be the envy of your fellow-women and will give you the allurements of a perfect womanhood that will be irresistible. They say there is nothing new under the sun but I have perfected a new treatment that I want to share with my sisters.

What it did for me it can and will do for you, and I now offer it to you. Others offer to build up your figure with drugs, greasy skin foods, creams, dieting, massage and expensive instruments and devices. I have done away with all these injurious methods and have given a legion of women a luxuriant natural development by a treatment never before offered the public. No massaging, nothing to take, nothing to wear.

I was skinny, scrawny, flat and unattractive to men. Now I claim to be the highest priced artist's model in the United States, and what I did for myself I do for you.

I don't care what your age may be, I ask only that you be at least sixteen and not an invalid, and I will undertake to develop your bust in two weeks. All I ask is five or ten minutes of your time every day.

DESMOND YOU CUR, I HATE YOU. I LOVE DAMN CLAUDE ECLAIRE!
I STARTED THE CRY OF "FIRE" IN THIS THEATER SO THAT THEY WOULD DROP THE ASBESTOS CURTAIN ON TOP OF YOUR LOVER CLAUDE WHO TRIED TO SHOOT ME FROM THE STAGE. THE PANIC STRICKEN AUDIENCE ARE RUSHING OUT I'M IN CONTROL HERE!
OUCH! THIS IS DESMOND'S WORK!
NOW TO PULL THE BUNK HERO CLAUDE FROM UNDER THIS CURTAIN. I MUST HAVE HIM IN MY POWER. ROSAMOND CANNOT LEAVE THE BOX HA, HA, HA!
LET GO OF MY LEGS, DESMOND YOU VILLAIN!
HORRORS! I CANNOT LIFT THIS HEAVY CURTAIN, BUT I CAN CRAWL "UP STAGE" AND CARRY THE CURTAIN AND VILLAIN DESMOND WITH ME. I HAVE A PLAN TO FOIL HIM
CURSES! HE'S CRAWLING "UP STAGE" BUT I'LL FOLLOW TILL I GET HIM, HA, HA
CURSES! A TRAP DOOR!
I'VE DRAGGED THE VILLAIN TO A TRAP AND PRESSED THE BUTTON. HE IS IN MY POWER NOW!
CLAUDE MY HERO! HOLD HIM DOWN TILL I AM ABLE TO ESCAPE THIS BOX
ASBESTOS
ROSAMOND, I HAVE DESMOND AT LAST!
CURSES! I'LL GET MY REVENGE YET, YOU BUNK HERO
HERSHFIELD

I.—TRAPPED!
Desmond's ingenious plan to trap Claude by shouting "Fire!" and having the heavy asbestos curtain lowered upon our hero has worked perfectly. By looking at the first picture you will see Claude's feet sticking out. The weight of the curtain rests upon his legs and pins him to the stage so securely that he cannot move.

II.—HAUL AWAY.
Jumping from the stage, Desmond seizes Claude by the feet and begins to haul away, while Rosamond in the high box looks on, powerless to aid her lover in his desperate plight. But even now the villain, as you can see by his strained attitude, is not having the easy time he expected in getting Claude.

III.—A STRUGGLING HERO.
With all the strength of his powerful arms, Claude gradually forces himself back along the stage, dragging with him not only the heavy curtain, but the villain who is trying to pull him the opposite way. It is impossible for us to guess why Claude adopts this plan, as appearances show that he might as well surrender.

IV.—DRAGGED ALONG.
Despite all his efforts, Desmond is being slowly dragged along the stage. However, he figures that he will get Claude as soon as our hero can go no further back, and so the villian laughs to himself, as he follows the curtain. Claude's plan, if he has one, is no more apparent now than before. Desmond dismisses all fear.

V.—THE SURPRISE.
A trap door! Too late Desmond gets wise to the ingenious plan devised by Claude for his capture. Our hero has led the scoundrel straight over a trap door, and by pressing the button has precipitated Desmond into a cell below the stage. It comes as a complete surprise to the villian, and a disagreeable surprise, too.

VI.—BOXED UP.
"I'm the boy-ki!" comes in muffled tones from beneath the stage, where Desmond is a prisoner. Rosamond from the box congratulates her lover upon his ingenious plan for the capture of the international crook, who has made their young lives so miserable. Monday we shall see what revenge they take upon the scoundrel.

Dr. Omayl laid a hand on Tokorama's arm. "He must rest," he said gravely. "The strain has reached the breaking point."

DR. OMAYI was as regular a visitor as Lindener. He watched the breaking man as closely and carefully as he would have watched a fevered patient in the hour of the crisis. He superintended the meals and personally administered the stimulants he prescribed, to be certain that Tokorama took them properly and at the proper time. But with all this he daily told Joshakawa that he doubted if Tokorama would hold out to finish his work.

Omayi was to return to Japan with Tokorama's manuscript. His passage was booked for the first of the month, and there was still work to do on the day before. He and Joshakawa stayed with Tokorama all that day and kept him at his task. When his head drooped through sheer weakness, the physician always managed to bring it up again with his hypodermic needle.

Long after midnight the others came in, watched in silence, ready to help in any way that help might be needed, and as the shadows crept into the room Tokorama suddenly sank across the desk with a low moan.

Joshakawa leaned over and shook the limp shoulder impatiently.

"Work! Work, my friend!" he exclaimed. "You have still much to do!"

Nearing the End

Tokorama only moaned and made no effort to sit up. Joshakawa turned to the doctor with a quick look of appeal, but Dr. Omayi shook his head reassuringly. Joshakawa muttered an angry exclamation.

"But the work must be finished!" he cried. "Let us go and leave him for a while. We will return!"

Dr. Omayi laid a hand on Joshakawa's arm. "He must rest," he said gravely. "The strain has reached the breaking point."

protested, with another shake of the spineless figure. "We have been waiting two months for this. Make the entry, Tokorama! Omayi starts for home in the morning and he must take the work with him!"

He shook Tokorama again and spoke exactly as he would to a stupid boy. Dr. Omayi laid a hand on his arm.

"He must rest," he said, gravely. "The strain has reached the breaking point."

"But he cannot," insisted Joshakawa, feverishly. The doctor shrugged his shoulders, but over Tokorama's face his pulse. Then he gently drew him back and peered into his upturned eyes. He stepped back, raised his eyes to Joshakawa's anxious ones and shook his head again.

"It is enough!" he said, firmly. "He must rest for a few hours. It has been too much for him!"

Joshakawa started to break out with protests, but the doctor coolly turned his back and began preparing a dose of medicine. Muttering angrily under his breath, Joshakawa accepted the inevitable.

"Come!" he said to the others. "Let us go and leave him for a while. We will return!"

"But the work must be finished!" he cried. "Let us go and leave him for a while. We will return!"

But, remember, doctor, the work must be finished tonight. You had better remain with him."

With a last look at his patient the doctor joined Joshakawa at the door of the ante-room.

"I can do nothing more for him at present," he said quietly. "Rest is the only thing that will help him. It would be better to leave him entirely alone."

Boston Is Searching All Over the Country for Two Men Whom It Will Cheerfully Pay $10,500 a Year

One of Them Must Supervise the Education of 100,000 Children in the Public Schools—The Other Will Look After the General Health of Half a Million People—And We May Have to Pay Them More Than the $10,500, for WE WANT THE BEST

The Mayor of Boston and the members of the Boston School Committee are engaged just now in what might almost be called competition. Both the Mayor and the School Committee are looking for THE ONE MAN.

Mr. Fitzgerald wants a CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH. The office pays $4,500 a year. His Honor believes the city will have to pay more than that for the ONE man. He has publicly assured the unknown that he will do all in his power to have the salary raised to a point more nearly commensurate with the duties and responsibilities of the place.

The School Committee is searching high and low for a SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS, at $6,000 a year. The salary is not too high for the greatest educational centre in the Union to pay the man who supervises the education of 100,000 children.

Every citizen of Boston must desire in his heart the greatest success to the Mayor and the School Committee. Boston wants the BEST MAN AVAILABLE to take charge of its Health Department. In like manner Boston must have the BEST SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT in the land. This proud old city—and this growing and thriving and progressive young city, for Boston is BOTH—will be satisfied with NOTHING LESS THAN THE BEST.

Here and there we note a tendency on the part of some critics to be IMPATIENT with the School Committee. It is as if one had merely to grasp his hat and cane, step out into the street, pick a man from the crowd, offer him $6,000 a year, and place him in charge of the schools of Boston.

LET THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE ALONE!

The man at the head of a school system as vast as that of Boston must be the possessor of THREE GREAT QUALITIES.

The Superintendent of Schools must be a thorough scholar, an experienced pedagogue.

To his knowledge of the theory and practice of education the superintendent of schools must add the ability to run a great educational machine. The ability to organize, to systematize, to understand the innumerable details of a system so great is of QUITE AS MUCH IMPORTANCE AS SCHOLARSHIP. A man with all the knowledge of the universe, but without the power to make that knowledge effective, to impart it to others, would be powerless as superintendent of schools.

But there is STILL ANOTHER POWER the school leader must possess.

He must be SYMPATHETIC. He must UNDERSTAND THE PEOPLE. He must have TACT. He must be able to INSPIRE THOSE WHO WORK WITH HIM. Otherwise he may fall short of the very essence of a good educator.

Where shall the educator be found with ALL these qualities well developed?

There are college men who possess the scholarship, but who are MINUS THE OTHER ELEMENTS.

There are business men with the executive ability, but WITHOUT THE TWO OTHER REQUIREMENTS.

And there are good fellows everywhere who would be in NO WAY CAPABLE AS EDUCATORS OR EXECUTIVES.

One can readily understand that the choosing of a first-class superintendent of schools is a difficult proposition. And it is needless to say that THE PERFECT MAN WILL NOT BE FOUND.

The School Committee should be given all the time they desire. Let their search continue unhampered and unbiased.

QUITE AS DIFFICULT is the task before Mayor Fitzgerald, as busy a toiler, we suppose, as may be found in any City Hall from Portland to Seattle.

One of the greatest of municipal disgraces is a HIGH DEATH RATE.

The ideal health department will do everything possible to PREVENT disease. It will COMPEL LANDLORDS TO MAINTAIN THEIR TENEMENTS IN HEALTHFUL CONDITION.

There is one gloomy court in the South End of Boston which is far more filthy and rotten today than it was ten years ago, when a committee of citizens pronounced it unfit for habitation.

The new Chairman of the Board of Health must be a man trained in the best medical schools.

He must have had experience under the best hygienic experts.

He must understand his fellowmen.

Mayor Fitzgerald is looking for such a man. When he has found him Mr. Fitzgerald will have done that for the city of his birth which will live in the minds of the citizens as proof of the Mayor's deep and sincere regard for the people of Boston.

Mayor Fitzgerald might get some valuable advice in his selection by consulting Dr. Harvey N. Wiley, the recognized world's authority on health matters.

The Kind of a Trade for a Girl

"Womanly Occupations" Far Better Than the Mad Pursuit of a Man's Job

By DOROTHY DIX

A FEW days ago I wrote an article for this column in which I urged upon parents the importance of having their daughters taught some kind of a trade or profession by which they could earn a living if it ever became necessary for them to do so. Since the article in question was published I have received scores of letters from fathers and mothers, and the young women themselves, asking what trade I would suggest as a good one for a girl to study.

Naturally, this would depend a great deal upon a young woman's natural aptitude. Also upon her necessity. There are girls who are born to write, or to act, to paint, or sculpt, or sing, or be doctors. These, in this day of women's opportunity, will find their occupation for themselves.

There are other girls—poor girls, with a present necessity for earning money—who must be clerks, or trained nurses, or stenographers, or something else that will bring them in ready cash.

I did not refer to either of these classes of young women when I urged parents to have their daughters taught some way to make a living. I spoke specifically of girls belonging to well-to-do families, who have comfortable homes and good prospects, and no immediate need of becoming breadwinners, but who should, none the less, be safeguarded against some future catastrophe that may throw them upon their own resources to support themselves.

What shall this girl be taught to do that will enable her to provide for herself if she is ever forced to sell her work in the labor market of the world

Womanly Occupations

For myself, I am strongly in favor of women pursuing what is called the "womanly occupations." I believe that women never made a bigger mistake financially than when they leave their own peculiar field—the work they have been bred to for centuries, and for which they have what Darwin calls an inherited aptitude—to go off in mad pursuit of some man's job for which they were never built or trained.

I know there have been a few successful lady longshoremen, carpenters, boiler makers and steeple jacks, but how much more successful these women would have been if they had put the same grit, determination, intelligence and perseverance into being cooks or dressmakers.

Women have not the excuse for leaving their own bailiwick that it is overcrowded. Nowhere else is there such a scarcity of labor as in the lines of work that are peculiarly woman's own. Nowhere else is labor, grade for grade, so well paid. Nowhere else in the business world are there better opportunities for making fortunes than are open to the women who cater to their own sex.

Therefore, I urge upon girls to make a learned profession of cooking, sewing and millinery if they want to study something that will be an ever present help in time of trouble as they go along in every day life, and that will also be a trade by which they can support themselves if the necessity comes upon them.

Suppose you learn to be a cook. Not a theoretical cook, with a smattering of how things should be done. Not an amateur hit-or-miss-cook, one of the kind that can make fudge or chocolate icings, but a highly efficient, blue ribbon cook that is capable of turning out a first class meal, and who knows as well how to select things in a market as a hotel steward.

If you marry and have a home of your own you can use that knowledge and skill to the advantage of your family every day, and in that way you will keep in continual practice and add to your efficiency. Also, if your husband dies and you are left destitute, you will have a trade by which you can not only make a living but a fortune if you are sufficiently competent in your work. There is no better occupation in the world for a woman to follow than that of a boarding house keeper if she is an expert in her line.

Failure Their Own Fault

Of course you will shriek out that you know hundreds of boarding house keepers who fail. Yes. And it's invariably their own fault. I had the misfortune to have to live for nearly twenty years in boarding houses, and in all that time I never struck but one woman who understood her trade and who went about it intelligently and honestly, and that woman supported a family in luxury and retired with a competence.

The one thing that people will pay for is for physical comfort, and no woman who is able to supply her patrons with clean and comfortable rooms, well cooked food and good service ever failed as a boarding house keeper. The women who are sold out by the sheriff are the boarding house keepers who laid on their beds and read novels while servants wasted and stole, or who thought themselves so much above their jobs that they never condescended to see whether their "paying guests" were comfortable or not.

Sewing is an equally good trade for a woman to study. There is no better weapon than a needle with which to chase the wolf away from the door. No woman who can execute even a decent job of plain sewing will ever starve. If she can do second class work, and make a dress that you can wear, other women fight over her, while if she is capable of turning out really good work and of constructing a garment that you don't have to take back for alteration three times, women prostrate themselves before her and implore her to charge them what she will for her services.

A woman dressmaker recently refused a salary of $30,000 a year to give up her own business and become the head of the dressmaking department of a big department store, and every one of us knows a dozen other dressmakers—every dressmaker who was at all competent—who have made fortunes.

The moral of all of this is that the girl who wants to learn a trade can do no better than to accomplish herself in cooking and sewing, the old trades of her sex. She can ply them to advantage in her own home, and she can make a living with them if the occasion arises. But—and it is a capital BUT—she must learn to be an expert cook and housekeeper and dressmaker. The day of the blundering amateur is over. There is room now for only skill and trained intelligence.

American Editorial Factor in Victory

Massachusetts Milk Consumers' Association,
No. 49 Beacon Stret, Boston.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Your editorial favoring the Ellis milk bill was certainly a corker, and was one of the principal factors in securing our victory in the Senate. I am sending the editorial to members of the House and trust it will have the same effect there.

The arguments were put so plainly that no one could miss them. Your editorial writers certainly have got the art of plain, direct, appealing statement down to a science.

With many thanks, I am

Sincerely yours,
MYRON E. PIERCE,

The Sunday AMERICAN of Tomorrow Will be a Paper Such as Our Grandfathers Would Have Rubbed Their Eyes at in Wonder—Here Are Some Reasons Why

TOMORROW'S Boston Sunday AMERICAN will break all records of its circulation, now rising week by week to half-a-million. The biggest jump yet will be tomorrow. Why?

First of all, the news, every scrap of live news to be found on earth, will be in its columns.

And then will come some features which can be found in no other Boston newspaper. Here are a few:

For the first time the types will tell the story, the real, authoritative, inside story, of some of the research work done at the Carnegie laboratory in Roxbury. And, side by side with that recital will be printed Levanzin's own remarkable and thrilling recital of what he went through in the laboratory during those one and thirty days of fasting—the greatest feat of self-denial since the days of Dr. Tanner.

No novelist has ever weaved a story of the heart to excel in throbbing interest New England's greatest romance—gold by the million thrown into the balance against life-love and—the latter tipping the scales.

This story would hardly be believed in fiction. Yet it is true and it belongs to our very prosaic hour. Find the first hand solution in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Long ago Mutt and Jeff broke into the hearts and homes of New England. They have carried one more citadel, one that was supposed to be the most impregnable and exclusive in America. Mutt and Jeff have scaled the walls of Harvard and dropped down on the other side, right into the very "yard." Read how they did it in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The women of New England have made up their minds that Mrs. Cusumano ought not and shall not die in the electric chair if they can save her. Her dreadful sentence should be changed to life imprisonment. A mighty movement is on foot to induce the Governor and Council not to inflict the full penalty of the law in the case of this unfortunate. Why she should not be put to death forms a story in itself of deepest pathos. Read it in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

What else in those pages tomorrow?

News, live, vital, real, flashed through the night by telegraph and by cable, from every State in this grand republic and from every corner of the habitable globe. Every heart throb of the human life of this day, on imperial throne as in peasants' cabin, in cabinet council and on political platform, all will be told, briefly but completely, so the mind and the eye can grasp the facts, quick as the flash of a camera.

The City Life Section, whose reading makes the rafters ring in echoing laughter; the children's "funny part," in which Maud and the Katzenjammers and Little Jimmy and the rest do things as funny as any in all their popular and funny history.

Something that will please the boys and girls of Greater Boston is the ticket with each Sunday AMERICAN, giving admission to the games of the Greater Boston League.

You will not know what is going on in the sporting line unless you have the Sunday AMERICAN. Its reports are the most complete.

In addition to this, if you are interested in the Brady War Books, don't forget to clip your coupons.

The Crazy Thoughts contest, which is of itself a study in psychology of interest to Muensterberg of Harvard and Berlin; the contest as to "New England's Princess," with pictures of many of New England's prettiest girls; the honors of the mighty battle for the biggest job on earth; the glorious muddle of Republican politics in this fine old State of ours; the answer to the absorbing question of the moment, "After Crane, Who?"

"Killing TIME" is the soriest pastime a human being ever engaged in.

In tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN will be printed an editorial on this subject, which should be read by every thinking man and woman, by every hopeful, ambitious boy and girl throughout this vast community of New England. Not a line or a syllable should be skimmed over or ignored. It will be read aloud in 500,000 family circles; it will be filed away in the scrapbooks of clergymen and teachers, thousands, many thousands, of the bright boys and girls who shall devour its every sentence, will talk about it and quote from it in their mature years and then they will pass its lesson to their children.

Art and the drama; politics and human life; music and every form of recreation; doings of the churches, the societies and the clubs of Boston and New England.

Special articles by able writers in the magazine section and in the news columns, all the doings in the motor car world; what is happening along the North and South Shores.

All these features and many more will combine to make the Sunday AMERICAN of tomorrow a newspaper such as would be considered a miracle if foretold in the days of our grandfathers.

The Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow will be a triumph of constructive journalism.
